From Pollock's Course of Time. THE CONTRAST. The Waman of Fashion

Small her ambition was but strange. The distaff, needle, all domestic cares, Religion, children, husband, home, were things She could not hear the thought of ; bitter drugs That sickened her soul. The house of wanton

And revelry, the mask, the dance, she loved, And in their service soul and body spent Most cheerfully: a little admiration, Or true, or false, no matter which, pleased her And o'er the wreck of fortune lost, and health, And peace, and an eternity of bliss Lost, made her sweetly smile. She was convinced

That God made her greatly out of taste, And took much pains to make herself anew. Bedaubed with paint, and hung with ornaments Of curious selection-gaudy toys! A show unpaid for, paying to be seen! As beggar by the way, most humbly asking The alms of public gaze—she went abroad: Folly admired and indication gave Of envy : cold civility made bows, And smoothly flattered; wisdom shook his

And laughter shaped his lip into a smile ; Sobriety did stare; forethought grew pale; And modesty hung down the head and blushed And pity wept, as on the frothy surge Of fashion tossed, she passed them by, like sail Before some devilish blast, and got no time To think, and never thought till on the rock She dashed, of ruin, anguish and despair.

The Christian Woman. O how unlike this giddy thing in Time! And at the day of judgment how unlike ! The modest, meek, retiring dame. Her house Was ordered well; her children taught the way Of life-who, rising up in honor, called Her blest. Best pleased to be admired at home. And hear reflection from her husband's praise, Her own, she sought no gaze of foreign eye. His praise alone, and faithful love, and trust Reposed, was happiness enough for her. Yet who that saw her, pass, and heard the poor With earnest benedictions on her steps. Attend, could from obeisance keep his eye, Or tongue from due applause. In virtue fair, dorned with modesty, and matron grace Unspeakable, and love-her face was like The light, most welcome to the eye of man: Refreshing most, most honored, most desired Of all he saw in the dim world below, As morning, when she shed her golden locks, And on the dewy top of Hermon walked, Or Zion hill—so glorious was her path; Old men beheld, and did her reverence, And bade their daughters look, and take from

Example of their future life : the young Admired, and new resolve of virtue made. And none who was her husband asked : his air Serene, and countenance of joy, the sign Of inward satisfaction, as he passed The crowd, or sat among the elders, told. In holiness complete, and in the robes Of saving righteousness, arrayed for heaven, How fair, that day, among the fair, she stood ! How lovely on the eternal hills her steps !

Pomona Academy.

WE this day examined the Scholars at Pomo-na Academy, under the superintendance of Mr. James H. Wilkes. It gives us pleasure to state, that the pupils generally did well, and that the greater part did themselves much credit. The Examination was conucted by the Trustees. The progress made by many of the Students was remarkable. In Spelling, Reading, Writing and Arithmetic, the four great points of a good education, the performances were very satisfactory. With Geography and English Grammar there was a familiarity not often manifested by children. The classes in the Languages translated handsomely, and an uncommon degree of attention must have been paid to their grammars to have made them so ready and accurate in Parsing. From impressions made on our minds by this examination, we feel justified in saying, that Mr. Wilkes is a Teacher deserving much encouragement, both on account of his talents and attention to his school-

Vegetable Sirup and Powden FOR DISEASES OF THE LUNGS.

THE Proprietor of this Medicine, after repeat ed trials of its virtues, which have been tended with the most signal success, now offen it to those who are afflicted with the wastin diseases which it is designed to rel'eve, in ful confidence that it will be found efficacious, par ticularly if taken in the incipient stages of the diseases. For two years past, this Medicine has been prepared in the form of a Powder, & taken as at infusion, with the most happy success. It is not conviction, that either form will produce the sune happy result. Among its most prominen qualities the following may be mentioned, asen pernicious. It relieves chronic affections and congestions of the lungs by giving force to the languid circulation. It assuages coughs. It pro motes free and bland expectoration. It remove pain from the chest. It relieves asthmatic an difficult respiration. It corrects obstinate cos tiveness, and thus leaves the bowels in a regula and healthy state. Thus, it is found, that these painful symptoms which indicate diseased lung tient to that bodily vigour, which that cru disorder the consumption, if left to its natural operation, would very speedily destroy.
