COURTSHIP.

After my sleigh ride, last winter, and the slippery trick I was served by Patty Bean, nobody would suspect me of hankering after the women again in a hurry.—To hear me curse and swear, and rail out against the whole feminine gender, you would have taken it for granted, that I should never so much as look at one of them again, to all eternity; O, but I was wicked. "Darn and blast their eyes, says I.
Blame their skins; torment their hearts, and darn them to damnation." Finally I took an oath, and swore that if I ever meddled, or had any dealings with them again (in a sparkling line I mean), I wished I might be hanged and choked.

But swearing off from women, and then going into a meeting house, chock full of gals, all shining and glistening in their Sunday clothes, and clean faces, is like swearing off from liquor, and going into a grog shop. It's all smoke.

I held out, and kept firm my oath, for three whole Sundays. Forenoons, afternoons and intermissions complete. On the fourth, there were strong symptoms of a change of weather. A chap, about my size, was seen on the way to the meeting house, with a new patent hat on; his head hung by the ears, upon a shirt collar; his cravat had a pudding in it, and branched out in front, into a double bow knot. He carried a strait back and stiff neck, as a man ought when he has his best clothes on; and every time he spit he sprung his body forward like a jack knife, in order to shoot clear of the ruffles.

Squire Jones' pew is next but two to mine; and when I staid up to prayers, and take my coat tail under my arm, and turn my back to the minister, I naturally look right straight at Sally Jones. Now Sally has got a face not to be grinned at in a fog. Indeed as regards beauty, some folks think she can pull an even yoke with Patty Bean. For my part, I think there is not much boot between them. Any how they are so nigh matched that they have hated and despised each other, like rank poison, ever since they were school girls.

Squire Jones had got his evening fire on, and set himself down to reading the great bible, when he heard a rap at his door.—
"Walk in—Well John how der do? Git out, Pompey. Pretty well, I thank ye, Squire, and how do you do? Why, so as to be crawling—ye ugly beast, will ye hold yer yop; haul up a chair and sit down, John."

"How do you do, Mrs. Jones." "O mil-dlin, how's your marm? Don't forget the mat, there, Mr. Beedle." This put me in mind that I been off soundings several times, in the long muddy lane; and my boots were in a sweet pickle.

It was now old Captain Jones' turn, the grandfather. Being roused from a doze, by the bustle and racket, he opened both his eyes at first with wonder and astonishment. At last he began to halloo so loud, that you might hear him a mile; for he takes it for granted, that every body is just exactly as deaf as he is.

"Who is it? I say who in the world is it? Mrs. Jones going close to the ear, screamed out, 'it's Johnny Beedle.' 'Ho, Johnny Beedle. I remember he was one summer at the siege of Boston.' 'No, no, father, bless your heart, that was his grand father, that's been dead and gone this twenty years.' 'Ho, but where does he come from?' 'Down town.' 'Ho, and what does he follow for a livin'?' And he did not stop asking questions, after this sort, till all the particulars of the Beedle family were published and proclaimed in Mrs.
Jones' last screech. He then sunk back into his doze again.

The dog stretched himself before one andiron, and the cat squat down before the other. Silence came on by degrees, like a calm snow storm, till nothing was heard but a cricket under the hearth, keeping time with a sappy yellow birch forestick.
Sally sat upon prim, as if she were pinned to the chair back; her hands crossed gently upon her lap, and her eyes looking straight into the fire. Mammy Jones tried to straighten herself too, and laid her hands across in her lap. But they would not lay still. It was full twenty-four hours since they had done any work, and they were out of all patience with keeping Sunday. Do what she would to keep them quiet, they would bounce up, now and then, and go through the motions, in spite of the fourth commandment. For my part, I sat looking very much like a fool. The more I tried to say something, the more my tongue stuck fast. I put my right leg over the left, and said 'hem.' Then I changed, and put the left leg over the right. It was no use; the silence kept coming on thicker and thicker and thicker. The drops of sweat began to crawl all over me. I got my eye upon my hat, hanging on a peg, on the road to the door; and then I eyed the door. At this moment the old Captain, all at once sung out 'Johnny Beedle!— It sounded like a clap of thunder, and I started right up on an end.

'Johnny Beedle, you'll never handle sich a drumstick as your father did, if you live to the age of Methuselah. He would toss up his drumstick, and while it was whirlin' in the air, take off a gill er rum, and then ketch it as it come down, without losin' a stroke in the tune. What d'ye think of that, ha? But scull your chair round, close alongside er me, so you can hear. Now what have you come after?— I—after? O, jest takin' a walk. Pleasant walkin' I guess. I mean jest to see how ye all do. Ho, thats another lie.— you've come a courtin', Johnny Beedle; you're after our Sal. Say, now, d'ye want to marry, or only to court?'

That was what I call a choaker. Poor Sally made but one jump, and landed in the middle of the kitchen; and then she skulked in the dark corner, till the old man, after laughing himself into a whooping cough was put to bed.

Then came apples and cider; and, the ice being broke, plenty chat with mammy Jones about the minister and the sermon.— I agreed with her to a nicety, upon all the points of doctrine; but I had forgot the text and all the heads of the discourse but six. Then she teased and tormented me, to tell who I accounted the best singer in the gallery, that day. But mum; there was no getting that out of me. 'Praise to the face, is often disgrace, says I, throwing a sly squint at Sally.

At last, Mrs. Jones lighted t'other candle, and after charging Sally to look well to the fire, she led the way to bed, and the Squire gathered up his shoes and stockings, and followed.

Sally and I were left sitting a good yard apart, honest measure. For fear of getting tongue-tied again, I set right in, with a steady stream of talk. I told her all they particulars about the weather that was past; and also made some pretty cute guesses at what it was like to be in future. At first, I gave a hitch up with my chair at every full stop. Then growing saucy, I repeated it at every comma, and semicolon; and at last, it was hitch, hitch, hitch, and planted myself fast by the side of her.

'I swow, Sally, you looked so plaguey handsome to day, that I wanted to eat you up.' 'Pshaw, git along you,' says she.— My hand had crept along, somehow, upon its fingers, and began to scrape acquaintance with hers. She sent it home again with a desperate jerk. 'Try it again'; no better luck. 'Why, Miss Jones, you're gettin' upstropolous, a little old maidish, I guess.' Hands off, is fair play, Mr.
Beedle.'

It is a good sign to find a girl sulky.— I knew where the shoe pinched. It was that are Patty Bean business. So I went to work to persuade her that I had never had any notion after Patty; and to prove it, I fell to running her down at a great rate. Sally could not help chiming in with me, and I rather guess Miss Patty suffered a few. I, now, not only got hold of her hand without opposition, but managed to slip an arm around her waist.— But there was no satisfying me, so I must go to poking out my lips after a buss. I guess I rued it. She fetched me a slap in the face, that made me see stars, and my years rung like a brass kettle, for a quarter of an hour; I was forced to laugh at the joke, though out of the wrong side of my mouth, which gave my face something the look of a gridiron.

The battle now began the regular way.
'Ah, Sally, give me a kiss, and ha' done with it now. I won't, so there, nor tech to. I'll take it, whether or no. 'Do if you dare.' And at it we went rough and tumblin'. An odd destruction of starch now commenced. The bow of my cravat was squat up in a half a shake. At the next bout, smash went shirt collar, and at the same time, some of the head fastenings gave way and down came Sally's hair in a flood, like a mill dam broke loose, carrying away half a dozen combs. One dig of Sally's elbow, and my blooming ruffles wilted down to a dish cloth. But she had no time to boast. Soon her neck tackling began to shiver. It parted at the throat, and, whorah, came a whole school of blue and white beads, scampering and running races every way, about the floor.

By the hokey, if Sally Jones is't real git, there's no snakes. She fought fair, however. I must own, and neither tried to bite nor scratch; and when she could fight no longer, for want of breath, she yielded handsomely. Her arms fell down by her sides, her head back over her chair, her eyes closed, and there lay her little plump mouth, all in the air. Lord! did ye ever see a hawk pounce upon a young robin? a bumblebee upon a clover top.— I say nothing.

Consarn it, how a buss will crack, of a still frosty night. Mrs. Jones was about half way between asleep and awake.— 'There goes my yeast bottle, said she to herself, burst into twenty hundred pieces and my bread is all dough agin.'

The upshot of the matter is, I fell in love with Sally Jones, head over ears.— Every Sunday night, rain or shine, finds me tapping at Squire Jones' door, and twenty times have I been within a hair's breadth of popping the question. But now I have made a final resolve; and if I live until the next Sunday night, and if I don't get choaked in the trial, Sally Jones will hear thunder.—Portland Advertiser.

UNION HOTEL,

RALEIGH.

THE Subscriber informs his friends and the Public in general, that he has taken charge of that well known House of Entertainment, formerly occupied by Willie Jones, in the city of Raleigh, near the Capitol, where his Table will be furnished with the best the country and seasons afford, his beds in fine order, and his rooms commodious and neat. His Stables will be well supplied with good provender, attended by careful Ostlers, & his House with good Servants.
He will provide convenient Sheds under which to shelter Carriages, Gigs, &c. He hopes that with all these comforts, and his own unremit-ted attentions to please his guests, to merit and receive a share of public patronage. He also hopes that the Members of the General Assembly will call on him, as his charges will be moderate and his accommodations good.

Raleigh, August 19. ROBERT PERRY. 2

EAGLE HOTEL.

MR. GUION, most respectfully returns his thanks to the Public, for the very liberal encouragement he has received since he opened this ESTABLISHMENT, and hopes to merit a continuance of their favors.

Mr. G. has the satisfaction to inform the Public, that in addition to the improvements already made, eight additional Rooms will be completed by the ensuing Session of the Legislature, which will enable him to accommodate a larger number of Members of the Assembly than heretofore.

The charges, as hitherto, will be uniform and moderate, viz: for a Man and Horse per day, $1 50; for a Man alone, $1—with a small addition to those who wish a separate table.
Members of the Assembly will be charged $1 per day. Those who have rooms to themselves, will be subject to an additional charge for them.
Travellers desirous of stopping at the HOTEL, are often misled, by enquiring for the Stage-House. They are informed, that the Stages do not make it their regular stopping place, nor is the House known by that appellation. As many persons who travel in the Stage do stop at the Hotel, and many others would, if they could be assured they would not be delayed, they are informed, that no greater delay will be experienced at the Hotel, than at the Stage House; and those who wish to repose themselves for a day or two, will be sure to find at Guion's a clean bed and room for that purpose, with the best fare the market affords.

The situation of this House is one of the most pleasant in the City, being immediately north of the Capitol, adjacent to the business part of the town, but without the influence of the dust and inconvenience attending it.

It is now little more than a year, since the Subscriber took possession of this Establishment, when he found the House entirely out of repair, and almost without custom. He now has it in his power to say, that he has not only received encouragement sufficient to justify the improvements that have been made, but those also that are making, even without that support from the Stage Proprietors which he believes the conveniences, comfort and attention which are to be met with at the Hotel deserves, and which has fairly proven that the Public will give the preference to a well kept Public House.
