

Tobacco.—Many inquiries have been made as to the probable prospect of the price of Tobacco. We have heard of but a single offer being made, and that was to a gentleman of Halifax, Va. who is in the habit of making very good; he was offered six dollars, all round. We have conversed with a gentleman lately from Richmond, who informed us that the best mood, which he will be low. The crop is an abundant one; though to be more than equal to the demand.—Millon Gazette.

Counterfeiting.—This trade appears to be in a flourishing condition, if the number of persons apparently engaged in it, may be taken as an evidence of the fact. Recently one was taken up in this place, in whose possession various tools were found, but neither money nor plates. He is now in jail. Another has been committed to the jail of Washington City, for passing counterfeit bills, a portion of which he attempted to swallow, but he was secured before he got them all down. Another has been apprehended in Winchester, whose case is thus noticed in the Martinsburg Gazette: On Saturday last a man passed through this place, calling himself Henry Chaffin. Whilst here, he succeeded in passing to a mercantile house a fifty dollar counterfeit note of the Farmers, Bank of Virginia, payable at the branch in Lynchburg. It appears that he succeeded in like manner in passing a hundred dollar note at Middletown, Maryland, and a ten dollar note at each of the two toll gates betwixt this place and Boonsboro', all coun efforts on the Branch Bank of the United States. Two young men pursued him as far as Winchester, where he was overtaken and early on Sunday morning taken before a magistrate. On his way to the magistrate's, he was observed to be chewing paper, which was no doubt counterfeit notes. When before the magistrate, the fifty dollar note which he passed in this place, was laid on the table by one of the young gentlemen, for the purpose of being inspected; he immediately picked it up, and put the same into his mouth, and although seized and severely choked, succeeded in swallowing the same. Immediately after swallowing it, he gave fifty dollars in good money to the person to whom he passed the note.—No counterfeit money being found on him, and the note which he passed not to be produced, the laws of this commonwealth could not punish him; he was accordingly given over to the gentlemen who pursued him from Maryland.

Public Lands.—A committee of the House of Representatives of Tennessee made a report on the 1st ult. accompanied by a resolution requesting their Representatives, and instructing their Senators in Congress to use their exertions to have all the vacant lands of the United States in any of the States and Territories sold as soon as can reasonably be done, at a fair price, "so as to induce the investment of idle capital and the emigration of the excess of population in the old States." Also, that the funds thus realized by the General Government be equitably apportioned among the different States and Territories for the purposes of education.

Preferred Creditors.—By a recent act of the Legislature of New-York, a change has been made in the law relative to preferred creditors. After the first day of January ensuing, it will not be lawful in that State for an insolvent debtor under what is there termed the two-third act, to give a preference to endorsers or other creditors for money lent—all creditors are to be placed upon the same footing. The law provides that if it shall appear on the examination of an insolvent, at any time after the law takes effect, that in contemplation of his becoming insolvent, or petitioning for a discharge, or knowing of his insolvency, he had made an assignment, sale or transfer, either absolute or conditional, of any part of his estate real or personal, or of any interest therein, or confessed judgment, or given security with a view to give a preference for an antecedent debt to a creditor, he shall not be entitled to a discharge.

If any thing were wanting to evince the rapid growth of our western region, the following description that has been handed us of a hotel at Ithaca, would afford ample evidence. Simeon De Witt, Esq. we believe first marked out the site of the village, and is still a principal proprietor. It was then a wilderness—it now exhibits the busy hum, "pride pomp and circumstance," of a city. Its only architecture was then the rude and comfortless wigwam of the savage—it is now adorned with structures that will minister to every caprice of luxury, and almost vie in magnificence with the splendid saloons on the banks of the Tappan.—N. Y. Herald.

"The Clinton House," says our informant, "now finishing in the village of Ithaca, will be ready for the reception of company in the course of a few weeks. Its spacious and convenient arrangements will be surpassed by few if any in the State, being in front 123 feet, 5 stories high including the basement and attics. Its height, from the foundation to the circular walk on the cupola, is 85 feet, affording at once a beautiful prospect of the village, and of the surrounding country. When finished it will contain 151 rooms, including several extensive halls, one of which is 120 feet long, a dining room 96 feet long, an assembly room 60 by 27 feet, and several rooms calculated for cold and warm baths. The front has a portico 52 feet in length, supported by six Ionic columns, which are calculated for marbling, and the finish throughout is of the best workmanship, and in the most modern style.

The feelings of Lady Morgan when ushered into the society of those whom the world calls great are pleasantly described in the subsequent extract from her book of the Boudoir. It expresses the conflicting emotions that a person of sensibility will often experience, even in less dazzling scenes. There is a chill in the shade that rapt, and fortune fling over the pride of genius, which its philosophy, (and even greater philosophy and genius than that of Lady Morgan) finds it difficult to surmount or repress.

I arrived at New Burlington street, says the authoress, without my Irish harp, and with a beating heart; and I heard the high sounding titles of princes and ambassadors and dukes and duchesses announced, long before my poor plebeian Hibernian name puzzled the porter, and was banded from footmen, as all names are banded, which are not written down in the red book of Fashion, nor rendered familiar to the lips of her insolent menials. How I wished myself back in Tirrerragh, with my own principles, the O's and Mac's; and yet this position was among the items of my highest ambition! To be sought after by the great not for any accidental circumstances of birth, rank or fortune, but simply "pour les beaux yeux de mon merite," was a principal item in the Utopia of my youthful fancy. I endeavored to recall the fact to mind; but it would not do; & as I ascended the marble stairs, with their gilt balustrade, I was agitated by emotions, similar to those which drew from my countryman, Maurice Quill, his frank exclamation in the heat of the battle of Victoria—"Oh Jesus, I wish some one of my greatest enemies was kicking me down Dame street!"—Jb.

A fatal and melancholy accident occurred this forenoon at pier No. 13 E. R. The Salem, for N. Orleans, being about to sail Mr. Miligan of New Orleans, wife, child and servant, who were to embark in the Salem, drove down in a back to the wharf. In turning the carriage round, one of the wheels came off, and the consequence was that the carriage with its passengers, was overturned into the dock. Unhappily Mrs. Miligan sunk immediately, and all efforts to recover the body have hitherto proved unavailing. Mr. Miligan, the child, and the servant, were saved.

DIED.—The body of Mrs. Miligan has just been recovered—the Coroner's inquest is now sitting. The accident occurred thus: The coachman having driven to the wrong pier, was turning his carriage, when, in so doing, the horses trod on some bar iron lying loosely on the wharf, which alarmed them—caused them to back, and before they could be urged forward, the carriage was forced over the wharf, dragging them with it. The horses were drowned, and the carriage sunk.

TAYLORSVILLE, HANOVER CO. VA.
J. S. SKINNER, Esq. October 28, 1829.
Sir: I yesterday weighed the produce of three pumpkin vines, raised in my garden, and among a crop of beets. There were forty-three pumpkins that came to perfection, which weighed 1898½ lbs.; besides, there were a number that did not ripen. Sixteen of the largest weighed as follows: 67½, 67, 66, 66, 64, 63½, 62½, 63, 62½, 62, 60, 56½, 52, 50 lbs. I never before noticed the produce of a vine, and take the liberty of asking you if you ever did, and what was the greatest weight. I have known a single pumpkin to weigh 82 lbs.; it was raised a good many years past, in this neighborhood, by Col. Wm. O. Winstan. WM. W. TAYLOR.

Rags—are annually imported into this country from Italy and Germany to a large amount. If the Germans are overstocked with this article while we are short, the reason is, that they preserve their rags and we do not: for there is no part of the world where the business of book making is carried to a greater extent than in the North of Germany.

A correspondent tells us of a lady in this city who has adopted the following method: A bag is hung in the nursery, into which her children throw all the rags they can find about the house, and when they amount to 6 lbs. she buys them at 3 cents per lb. The money thus paid to her children is nearly sufficient to purchase all their play things. When the quantity collected amounts to 100 lbs. which it does only once a year, they are sold to a rag merchant for 4 cents a lb. and the avails are applied to the purchase of books for a Nursery Library. In this way the children are taught habits of economy, while at the same time they are furnished with better means of information than are to be found in many houses of affluence. If "a penny saved is as good as a penny earned," there are thousands of families in this city who would do well to follow the same example.

Restoring the hair.—A singular case is mentioned in the last volume of the Medical Journal, of the complete restoration of the hair of a person who had become quite bald, by the use of a solution of sulphate of copper in French brandy. As the application, when used only once a day, cannot be injurious, it is worth a trial in cases of baldness.

Natural History.—In July, 1828, J. Swarthack, Esq. of Sowerby, had a live toad put into a flower pot, without any sustenance whatever, which he covered with a slate, and buried 18 inches deep in his garden. Last month, he caused it to be disinterred and found it to be as healthy, to all appearance, as when first put in, and of a beautiful gold colour; but, on its exposure to the air, it resumed its usual dusky hue. Mr. S. has a gain consigned it to its ark abode for another year.—London paper.

New-York, Oct. 31.
THE STORM, which has been impending over us for several days, burst forth last evening, with great violence. It was very dark, and the rain fell in torrents.—The blow was very heavy during the night, and the wind howls loudly, and the rain falls briskly, at this hour, 1 o'clock. The tides are so high that many of the docks and slips are submerged.

The wharves are now overflowed, and on the east side the water is nearly up to Water-street. At 12 o'clock, in Front street and Burling slip, the water was up to the hub of the cartmen's carts.—The cellars are nearly all filled—boats are plying in Flymarket street between South and Front streets. The stores under Flymarket are covered to the depth of twelve inches. Some thousand rats, driven from the docks, have been killed by the boys and dogs.

In this city, on the 9th inst. William B. Hunter, M. D. in the 29th year of his age. To those who knew Doctor Hunter, an obituary notice could not do more than partially to recal many pleasing recollections of a man endeared to all with whom he associated, by a manly, spirited, and noble deportment. The friends in his sick room, the physicians around his bed, and all around his tomb, shewed how deeply they were interested in his fate. And the hearts of all must rejoice, that William H. Hunter left this world rejoicing in that mercy, which he hoped, had blotted out from the book of record on high, the remembrance of aught that could pain the hearts of those who mourn his early removal from this life of duty and of trial. On Tuesday he was carried from his dwelling, by his Masonic brethren of Itham Lodge, No. 40, (of which he was Master at the time of his death) to the Methodist Church, where a discourse was delivered by the Rev. Th. P. Hunt, from the following text, selected by Doctor Hunter himself: "For I was as a sheep going astray; but now have I returned to the Shepherd and Bishop of my soul." From the Church his remains, attended by a large procession, were carried to the family burying-ground, and interred with Masonic honors.—Communicated.

Roanoke Literary and Scientific Institution.
THE location of this institution has been changed from Littleton to Oxford, N. C. In announcing this change to the public, some remarks in relation to the causes which induced it, may be necessary. The object is to establish in the State of North-Carolina the institution upon a permanent basis. At Littleton, although it possesses the advantages of health and retirement in an eminent degree, it was found, that the convenience and opportunities for carrying it on, would be incommensurate with the object in view, particularly since the death of the late proprietor of that place. In selecting a new location, regard has been paid to public opinion; and so far as it could be ascertained, the feeling of the public has centered upon Oxford as the most suitable location in the State.

Oxford has long been known as a place of flourishing and well conducted schools. For its health, its moral and refined society, it stands pre-eminent. The site selected for the institution is pleasant and retired; the buildings and grounds are spacious; and such measures will be adopted in the government of the institution as will prevent the students from any unreasonable communication with the village. The plan heretofore laid before the public will still be pursued. Any further information in relation to the institution, may be had on application to the subscriber.
