WET FEET.

The following seasonable remarks on this subject, are from the last number of the Journal of Health:

What a crowd of painful recollections are conjured up in the mind of a physician of any age and experience, by the words wet feet.

The child which had been playing about in the morning, in all its infantile loveliness and vivacity, is seized at night with croup from wet feet, and in a day or two is a corpse. The youthful form of female beauty, which a few months before glandered the eyes of every beholder, is now wasting in slow remediless decay. What was the origin of her malady? Wet feet.
Let us hope that exposure was incurred in a visit of mercy to a helpless widow or distressed orphan. Whence come the lingering disease, the pain and suffering of that fond mother? Still the same response—getting wet feet, while providing suitable winter clothing for her children—as if tenderness for her offspring justified her dispensing with all the rules of prudence for herself. Thus we might continue the melancholy list of diseases, at best harassing and alarming, often fatal, to which the heedlessness of youth, the pride of manhood or the avarice of old age, are voluntarily and causelessly exposed, by a neglect of one lesson of every day experience.

It needs no medical lore or laboured reasoning to show the great influence which impressions on the feet exert over the rest of the body at large. The real martyrdom produced by tickling them, and the cruel punishment of the bastinado, are sensible evidences of their exquisite delicacy of feeling. Of this fact we have more pleasurable experience in the glow diffused through the whole system, when chilled and shivering, we hold them for a while to the fire, and when, during the prevalence of the dog star, we immerse them in cold water to allay the heat which is then coursing through our veins. Are the internal organs of the body a prey to wasting inflammation, as in the hectic fever of consumption? Is there a sensation of burning heat in the feet. Is the body feeble and the stomach unable to perform its digestive functions? These parts are habitually cold.
In both health and disease there is a constant sympathy between the feet and the different organs of the body. Whatever be the weak part, it suffers with equal certainty from the impressions of cold and moisture on the feet. No matter whether the tendency be to sick head-ache, or sore throat, hoarseness and cough—pain of the stomach, or rheumatism, or the gout—severally, and all, they will be brought on by getting the feet wet, or at times, even by these parts being long chilled, from standing on cold ground or pavement. And who, it might be asked, are the chief victims to such exposures? Not the traveller caught in the storm, or the man of business, or even the day-labourer, who cannot always watch the appearance of the clouds and pick their steps with an especial avoidance of a muddy soil, or wet streets—no!—we must look for the largest number of these sufferers among the rich, the fair, and the lovely of the land—those who need only walk abroad when invited by the fair blue sky and shining sun; or who, if pleasure calls at other seasons, have all the means of protection against the elemental changes, which wealth can command of ingenuity and labor.

They it is who neglect suitable protection for their feet, and brave the snow and rain with such a frail covering as would make the strong man tremble for his own health, were he to be equally daring.

At a season like the present it would seem to be a matter of gratulation, that shoes and boots can every where be obtained of such materials as to preserve the feet dry and warm. Leather of various kinds, firm or pliable and soft, is at the shortest warning made, to assume every variety of shape and figure, called for by convenience of fashion. But we mistake —fashion, that despotic destroyer of comfort, and too often a sworn foe to health, will not allow the feet of a lady fair to be increased in leather. She must wear, forsooth, cloth shoes with a thin leather sole, and even this latter is barely conceded.

A covering for the feet never originally intended to be seen beyond the chamber or the parlour, is that now adopted for street parade and travel; and they whose cheeks we would not that the winds of heaven should visit too roughly, brave in prome-lades the extremes of cold and moisture, and for the natives as willing victims to all the sufferings of the shivering age, catarrh, and pains of rheumatism. Tell them of a wiser course; argue with some, on their duties, as mothers and as wives, to preserve their health—with others, as daughters of beauty who are risking, by approaching disease, the loss of their loveliness, and they will reply, that they cannot wear those horrid large shoes—that the leather does not fit so nicely on the feet, and that India rubber shoes are frivolous. They do not reflect that beauty consists in the fitness and harmony of things, and that we cannot associate it with the ideas of suffering and disease.

VENTRILQUISM.

Mr. Nichols was in this city, in the year 1821, when he gave the following humorous specimen of his powers. Walking with a friend, between 9 and 10 o'clock at night, past the corner of Church and Market streets where a well was sinking, the surface being lightly covered with loose boards, his companion suggested to him that it offered a good opportunity to exert his powers of speech. Two or three persons happened to be near the spot, when Mr. Nichols raised one of the boards, and asked who was down there? No answer was returned. He again asked did he not hear some one down there calling for help?
A voice answered at the bottom of the well yes, sir. Mr. N. How came you down there? Voice—The workman left me here and shut the well—Oh! L. I'll, my friend put down a ladder or a rope and help me out! By this time 30 or 40 persons had assembled, uttering curses on the workmen for leaving the man in the well.
One man recognised in the voice old Tony Schuyler, a black man; said he knew him; he now called out to him, "Tony, is that you?" Voice—Yes sir: for God's sake help me out, I am almost frozen and drowned. The man asked how long he had been there? Voice—Two hours: O Lord, put down a ladder! By this time there had arrived a number of lanterns, ropes, ladders, &c. Mr. N. now walked off and left the deceived multitude preparing to draw Tony from the well. Their lights, however, soon convinced them that Tony was not there. Now a warm dispute arose among those who said it was all a hoax, and those who swore they heard Tony. The writer left them in the height of their dispute, and went home.—Albany Adc.

without a personal inspection of the premises.

Either of the subscribers living above Smith-ing near the land, will show its lines and local-

Southern Female Classical Se- minary.

MR. & MRS. HOLLISTER have removed their Seminary for Young Ladies to Oxford, N. C. and have engaged the assistance of Miss E. HUMPHREYS, in the department of Music. Of the qualifications of Miss Humphreys, the public need no better proof than the high reputation which she has maintained during the two last years as a Teacher of Music in Oxford, and the fact that previous to her coming to this place she was the principal Teacher of Music in the celebrated Moravian School at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

This Seminary, which has been in operation in Mecklenburg, Va. for two years past, has received unequivocal proofs of the approbation of an enlightened public. The plans employed for promoting habits of diligence and correct deportment, are, for the most part original, and very powerful in their influence.

The next Session will commence on Monday the 11th of January next. For further particu-
