SKETCHES OF CHARACTER.

SKETCHES OF PUBLIC CHARACTER.—By Ignatius Loyola Robertson, L. L. D. A volume by this title, containing about 260 pages, has just been put into our hands.

Although it purports to be the production of an Englishman, resident in America, yet, from certain developments of private history which a foreigner could hardly be presumed to know, we are led to think it the work of an American pen.
Indeed, were we to judge from internal evidence, we should be apt to ascribe it to an author who has done much to elevate the character of American literature, and whose former labors have received high and deserved commendation, even from the austere critics of Europe. But, whenever he may be in person, we venture to say, that his book will be sought for with avidity, and read with much gratification. It contains sketches of most of the eminent characters of the present day, and some of the past. Among them are seven Presidents of the United States, Vice President Calhoun, Messrs. Livingston, Johnson, Berrien, Webster, Randolph, Everett, McDuff, Dwight, Gen. Brown, Judge Washington, Dr. Mitchell, Basil Hall, Owen, Bartlett, &c. &c. The object of the author seems to be not so much a biographical account as a delineation of character; and hence, of some of them, striking incidents or marked peculiarities only are recorded. It abounds with facts, anecdotes and reflections, conveyed in the epistolary form, in an easy, flowing, spectacular style. The author must have mingled with the subjects of his memoirs, and has drawn portraits, so far as we are able to judge, with fearless and scrupulous fidelity. There seems to be no indication that he had attached himself to any political party, for the prejudice which naturally adheres to such attachments is not discoverable in the volume, so far as we have found leisure to examine it. We give to day his sketch of Mr. EVERETT.

Washington, —, 1830.

DEAR SIR: Mr. EVERETT you have seen and therefore I need not describe his person to you. When in Europe he was, as you know, much caressed as a learned man. His course has been singular and prominent:—While at Harvard University as a student he was distinguished very young; on leaving college, he studied divinity, and was ordained and settled a young prodigy. In elegant literature he had an equal of his age, and the world was delighted with his pulpit eloquence; whenever he preached, crowds of the most accomplished of both sexes assembled to hear his splendid sermons; these discourses, if they had not so much of the holy unction in them as in some sermons of graver men still there was a purity of taste and a sweet solemnity that made him delightful to hearers of all creeds. A few years after his ordination he was elected to a Professorship in Harvard University. This office he accepted, on condition of being allowed to visit Europe and reside a year or two in Germany. He set out on this tour with all the ardor of a young man panting for knowledge, and ambitious of surpassing all in his accomplishments. In his absence he visited Rome, France and England, and tarried some time in Göttingen, and became enamoured with German literature. He extended his travels to Greece, and there drank inspiration among the relics of ancient taste and greatness. He examined the Parthenon in its ruins with great minuteness, as well as all other things worthy of notice. He returned to his Alma Mater with a mind filled with "the spoils of time," and a memory stored with the humanities, the great object of his travels, and commenced his labors as a professor, and at once became the pride of the University and the delight of his pupils.

He did not confine himself to the instruction of College classes, but gave a splendid course of lectures on Architecture, which was numerous attended by the most enlightened persons of both sexes in the metropolis of New-England. At this time he was considered the Editor of the North-American Review, which was well conducted, and took the lead in the periodicals of the country. His portions of the work are distinguished for taste, talent, and learning; there is a variety and rarity about his productions that mark one born and bred among the muses. In fact he was a scholar by profession, and was the laurel among all the lettered and political American literature the politicians of the day turned their eyes upon him as a member of Congress, and he left the lecture room. In Congress he is respected for his learning and talents. When he rises all are anxious to catch every word he has to say—not that his eloquence there, is as good as it was in the pulpit, or the lecture room, but that the information he gives may be relied on, for he has day and date, chapter and page, for every thing he says; and the purity of his language forms a great contrast to that of many of those around him. He has too much refinement for the rough and tumble of Congress skirmishing. In this body he has frequently been selected as Chairman of Committees to make reports, on important subjects, and these are generally admired for their clearness of reasoning and appropriateness of style; these reports are said to prove that he is greater in the closet than on the floor of the House; but he is great everywhere.

Such men are wanted in the American Congress; for, loving the country so much as I do, I am constrained to confess that there is not little ignorance in the National Assembly, and that learning does not always receive its due honor. Mr. Everett's eloquence is characterized by taste, sweetness, harmony, delicacy, and correctness.
It has the Ciceronian flow, ease and purity, and all the great Roman's accuracy and marks of scholarship. He is said to be ambitious, and to dearly love political distinctions. Of this it is probable he will soon get cured in the sniffling and changes of party, and in the fullness of his genius, return from the bustle of the Hall of Legislation to the groves of the Academy he deserted. If it should so happen, it will be well; for learning should have more knowledge of the world than it generally has, and the world should have more learning than it is disposed to honor and cherish.

THE PIOUS NOBLEMAN.

The celebrated Earl of Chatham had a nephew to whom he was much attached.— When this young man was pursuing his studies at Cambridge, his uncle wrote him several letters of advice, which were afterwards published by Lord Granville. On the important subject of Religion, the Earl thus addresses his relative: "I come now to that part of the advice I have to offer you, which most nearly concerns your wellfare, and upon which every good and honorable purpose of your life will assuredly turn; I mean the keeping up in your heart the true sentiments of religion. If you are not right towards God, you can never be so towards man: the noblest sentiment of the human breast is here brought to the test.—Is gratitude in the number of a man's virtues? If it be, the highest Benefactor demands the warmest return of gratitude, love and praise. If a man wants this virtue, while there are infinite obligations to excite it, and quicken it, he will be likely to want all others towards his fellow-creatures, whose utmost gifts are poor, compared to those he daily receives at the hands of his never-failing almighty Friend.
Remember thy creator in the days of thy youth, is his with the deepest wisdom:
"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; and, an upright heart that is understanding." This is eternally true, whether the wis and sages of Cambridge allow it or not; nay, I must add to this religious wisdom, "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, & all her paths are peace," whatever your young gentlemen of pleasure think of a tainted health and battered constitution. Hold fast, therefore, by this sheet anchor of happiness, Religion.—You will often want it in the times of most danger—the storms and tempests of life.
Cherish true religion as preciously as you will fly from abhorrence & contempt, from superstition & enthusiasm. The first is the perfection and glory of the human nature; of the two last, the deprivation an disgrace of it. Remember the essence of Religion is a heart void of offence towards God and man; not subtle, speculative opinions, but an active vital principle of faith."

James H. Swindells, ington, Fayetteville, and other places in the the country, for the purpose mentioned in this of the business, has induced him to undertake the contemplated trip. No pay unless the parties

STOP THE RUNAWAY.

IN December last, I purchased in Raleigh, of Mr. John Morrison and Mrs. Pearson, of Moore county, a negro man by the name of SAMUEL. On the 8th of March, said negro ran away from my plantation, near Brown's Store, in Caswell county. Samuel is 22 years of age, about 5 feet 10 inches high, very dark complexion, of thin visage, high cheek bones, and answers very slowly when spoken to. I understand he was raised in Moore county, by a Mr. Lewis and was sold to Mr. Pearson, who since died at Moore Court-House. He has been seen since he left me, at the house of his wife, who is the property of Mrs. Pearson, the lady of whom mention is above made. He is no doubt still lurking about there.

I will give $20 reward to any person who will deliver Samuel to me, at my residence in Rockingham county; or I will give $15 for his apprehension and confinement in any Jail, so that I get him again. WILLIAM BETHELL, some of the sections which were sold by the General Government previous to the passage of the act of 2d of March, 1827, and also a few tracts selected for lock sites, stone quarries, &c.

The sales will be continued from day to day, untill all the tracts shall have been offered, and so made for a less price per acre than is required for Congress lands. The purchaser will have it at his option to make full payment, and receive a patent for the tract purchased; or, by payment of one-fourth of the purchase money, at time of the sale, and the interest at six per cent. annually, in advance, a credit will be given by the State of seventeen years, from the first Monday in October next, for the residue.
The Eric and Wabash Canal, or within five miles of which these lands are situated, is 128 miles in the State of Indiana, the value of the Wabash and Maumee rivers, which for fertility of soil, abundance of lime-stone, springs, good timber interspersed occasionally with small prairie, navigable rivers, and water privileges, (independent of the Canal,) is decidedly amongst the finest portions of the Western country. The greatest part of the lands in the Canal Donation, is of the richest quality, in a healthy country, well adapted for agricultural, commercial and manufacturing purposes, and is daily increasing in value, from the rapidity of emigration to the lands adjoining, which is believed to be unprecedented, hitherto, in this State, and which must recommend this sale as particularly worthy the attention and interest of the Farmer, Mechanic, Merchant, and Capitalist.
