ISCELLANY.

The following anecdote, strongly ile trative of Pastern superstition and East. tyranny, is related in the MS. of Bi shop Heber's Journal. Some circumstances induced the editor to omit its publication, the principal of which was, that, as the King of Oude was then living, and was in the habit of making his aides de camp translate English books into Hindostanee for his information; she apprehended that the engineer, whose history it relates, might again fall under the power of the fa-That fear having been removed by the king's death, and the immediate dismissal from power of Hukeem Mendee, the prime minister, she no longer hesitates to relate it. . Many whimsical stories are current in Luck now respecting the foibles and blindness of the poor king, and the rescality of his favorite. His fundness for mechanics has been already mentioned. -In trying some experiments of this nahe fell in with a Mussulman engineer of pleasing address and ready talent, as well as considerable, though unimproved. genius for such pursuits. The king took so much delight in conversing with this man, that the minister began to fear rising competitor, as well knowing that the meanness of his own birth and functions had been no obstacle to his own advancement. He therefore sent the engineer ward, 'if he were wise to leave Lucknow. he poor man did so, removed to a place bout ten miles down the river, and set up a shop there. The king, an inquiring at er his humble friend was told that he was lead of cholera; ordered a gratuity to be sent to his widow and children-and no more was said. During these last rains, however, the king sailed down the river in his brig of war, as far as the place where the new shop stood : he was struck with the different signs of neatness and ingenuity which he observed in passing-made his men draw in to shore-and to his as. tonishment, saw the deceased engineer. who stood trembling, and with joined hands to receive him. After a short explanation, he ordered his to come on board-returned in his anger to Lucknow -and calling the minister asked him if it were certain that such a man was dead · Undoubtedly !' was the reply · I myself ascertained the fact, and conveyed your majesty's bounty to the widow and children- Huranzada !' said the king, barsting into fury- look there, and nev er see my face more!' The vizier turned round and saw how matters were circumstanced. With a terrible glance which seen the high sheriff coming in with a the king could not see, but which spoke volumes to the poor engineer, he imposed silence on the latter; then, turning round again to his master, stopping his nose, and with many muttered exclamations of God be merciful Satan is strong! In the name of God, keep the devil away ir m me!' he said-I hope your majesty has not tooched the horrible object? . Touch him!' said the king- the sight of him is enough to convince me of your rascality.' Istoficullah!' said the favorite; and does not your majesty perceive the strong smell of a dead carcase?' The king still stormed but his voice faultered, and cu. riosity and anxiety began to mingle with his indignation. It is certain, refuge of the world!' resumed the minister, 'that your majesty's tate engineer, with whom had readily brought him from the dinner above poured on his head, and the frolic be peace! is dead and buried; but your table. He was, in fact, a complete country gentleman, utterly ignorant of the aw, its terms and proceeding; and as I was the first of my name who had ever followed any profession, (the army accepted.) my opinion, as soon as I became a counsellor, was considered by him oracular; indeed, questions far beyond mine, and determination, than he seized a razor and sometimes beyond the power of any person existing to solve, were frequently submited for my decision by our neighors in the
