MISCELLANY.

In the Encyclopædia Americans one may find much to instruct and amuse, and information of societies, institutions, habits and customs of those in our vicinity may be obtained. Take the following article from the 4th volume of that work. It is stated that so pleased was one of the proprietors of Pennsylvania with the simple and harmless deportment of the Dunkers, that he offered them, gratuitously, a rich tract of land containing 5000 acres, contiguous to their own settlements, which they refused to accept, lest great possessions should render them ambitious; an example of forbearance not likely to be generally adopted. They had one of the first printing presses used in this state, and printed at an early date, their hymn-book, the testament, their chronicle, and other works convenient for themselves.—U. S.
Gazette.

Euphrata, an irregular village built and occupied by a Society of Seventh-day Baptists, on the Cocalico creek, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, 60 miles from the city of Philadelphia, and 38 from Harrisburg. This society usually denominated the Dunkers, was founded by Conrad Beissel, a German of much intelligence and piety, who had received a regular education at Halle, and took orders as a Calvinistic minister; but being persecuted for his opinions on some points of theology which he could not reconcile to his mind, he left Europe, and retired to this place about 1720, and soon formed a little colony, called Euphrata, in allusion to the Hebrews, who used to sing psalms on the borders of the Euphrates. It contains several very ancient and singular buildings, the principal of which are a brother and a sister house. The two houses for the brethren and sisters are very large, and are four stories high; each contains a chapel and is divided into small apartments, so that six dormitories, which are barely large enough to contain a cot, (in former times a bench and block for the head,) a closet and an hour glass, surround a common room, in which each mess have their meals and pursue their respective avocations. This people are remarkable for their rigid adherence to the precepts and ordinances of the new testament, even to the washing of the feet before administering the sacrament; and do not admit of any innovations whatever on the established forms & ceremonies of Christ.
They are very observant of the Sabbath (the seventh day.) The dress of the brethren and sisters is that of the Franciscan or White Friars. The members of the society are much dispersed; a large body of them now live in community at the Antintam, in Franklin county, Pennsylvania.— At one period, about 60 or 70 years since, they were very numerous, exceeding 500 in the cloister. The few that remain in the convent and the members in the adjacent country differ in no respect from their neighbors in dress or manners, though they live in the faith of their fathers and are remarked for their exemplary lives and deportment. The ancient community entertained some opinions which, in the present day, are deemed visionary and the product of enthusiasm and speculation.— They are much misrepresented, however, by those who assert that they live chiefly on roots and vegetables, the rules of the society not allowing them flesh, except on particular occasions; that they consider future happiness to be attained only by penance and outward mortification in this life, and that they disclaim violence, even in cases of self-defence, and suffer themselves to be defrauded or wronged rather than go to law. These writers are also in error when they state that they allow no intercourse between the brethren and sisters, not even by marriage. On the contrary, whenever two wish to engage in the bonds of wedlock they are aided by the society, though they consider celibacy a virtue. They are peaceful, and their manner of living is temperate; but they enjoy in moderation the same temporal good and comforts as their fellow-men.— They are distinguished for their music, which is peculiar, composed and arranged by themselves.

From the New-York Standard.

THE SABBATH BELL.

To all civilized nations—to all who revere the name of Him who fixed the stars —to all who stand in awe of the great architect of nature and of ourselves, the Sabbath Bell has a grateful sound. It strikes a deep and awful call to every man of relection. It invites the good and pure in heart to an holy converse with the Deity, and it warns the obstinate and depraved to pause, and turn, and be received. After the toils of the secular week, the morning Sabbath Bell tolls in the ear of a busy people, to rest from their labors, and enjoy the calm which the great almighty hath ordained—it rings to all nature the notes of peace and good-will to man.

The solemnities of our religion are variously observed, with equal value to man.
On a Sabbath morning, in the country, when Providence is breathing its smiles upon the earth, it is refreshing to hear the call of the country Sabbath Bell; to join the devotional procession as it winds its way in silence to the House that is dedicated to the God of the Universe. There is a holy charm in contemplating their simple and unadorned attire—blematical of the spotlessness of the spirit within—their meek and unaffected devotion, & the quiet concern of the soul in things that speaks of its everlasting peace.

Nor in a populous city like ours, is the spectacle less solemn. After the turmoil of business, & the fascinations of the week, the Sabbath Bell calls the venerable & the great, the young, the gay and the beautiful, to remember Him who imparts his blessings to the just, and even to the unjust. The prosperous tradesman, and the opulent merchant, are called from their cares, to devote a few hours to holy recreation.

They assemble in the holy house—all the diversified passions are lulled to rest—the business of the world is forgotten, and amidst the profound silence of the throng, a voice proclaims—the Lord is in his holy Temple—every heart and voice responds with conscious conviction, and with the deep and awful peal of the solemn organ, hundreds unite in praise to the mighty author of their existence, and in humble sup-plications to the dread, yet still merciful Almighty.

The evening orisons in Spain are conducted with the utmost solemnity. A friend of ours has said, that the most solemn scene he ever beheld, was that of 4000 human beings on their knees in the cathedral at Madrid, engaged in prayer. At the evening orison, however, when the bell tolls the signal that the sun has departed to light up another world—suddenly every vehicle is stopped—every lip is mute—every tongue is hushed—and from a vast patrion there ascends to heaven one united prayer to him who arched the firmament—to him who wove the rainbow—whose unseen but awfully pervading spirit, alike lights up the sunbeam in the morning, and walks upon the pinions of the midnight storm!

SOLITAIRE.

EARLY AUTUMN IN NEW-ENGLAND.

What can be more beautiful or more attractive than this season in New-England?
The sultry heat of summer has passed away; and a delicious coolness at evening succeeds the genial warmth of the day.— The labors of the husbandman approach their natural termination; and he gladdens with near prospect of his promised reward.
The earth swells with increase of vegetation. The fields wave their yellow & luxuriant harvests. The trees put forth their darkest foliage, half shading and half revealing their ripened fruits, to tempt the appetite of man, and proclaim the goodness of his Creator. Even in scenes of another sort, where nature reigns alone in her own majesty, there is much to awaken religious enthusiasm. As yet, the forests stand clothed in their dress of undecayed magnificence. The winds, that rustle through their tops, scarcely disturb the silence of the shades below. The mountains and the valleys glow in warm green, or lively russet.
The rivulets flow on with a noiseless current, reflecting back the images of many a glossy insect, that dips its wings in their cooling waters. The mornings & evenings are still vocal with the notes of a thousand warblers, who plume their wings for a latter flight. Above all, the clear blue sky, the long and sunny calms, the scarcely whispering breezes, the brilliant sunsets, lit up with all the wondrous magnificence of light, and shade, and color, slowly settling down into a pure and transparent twilight. These, these are days & scenes, which even the coldest cannot behold without emotion; but on which the meditative and pious gaze with profound admiration; for they breathe of holier and happier regions beyond the grave. JUDGE STORY.

JUST RECEIVED

Specimens of American Poetry, With Critical and Biographical Notices, In Three Volumes.
BY SAMUEL KETTEL.

"The above Work is the result of an attempt to do something for the cause of American Literature, by calling into notice and preserving a portion of what is valuable and characteristic in the writings of our native Poets. Under the persuasion that the American public will look with indulgence upon this effort to turn the attention to the literature and talent of our own country, the Author submits those volumes to their inspection. The undertaking is one which he thinks they cannot but contemplate with interest. With what degree of credit he has accomplished himself of the charge, it remains for you to determine."
