COUSIN TILLY'S BET

As soon as the Harrisburg Convention nominated the old hero of Tippecanoe as a suitable person to preside over our beloved country, Frank Smith looked around among his female friends to select a suitable individual to preside over his affections. Frank was a whole-souled Whig, and reposed the atmost confidence in the success of the nominee of the Convention. He was engaged in business and only declined taking a wife on account of the uncertainty of the times .-He kept an old dirty bachelor's hall which was genteely furnished with every thing requisite for house-keeping. All that was wanting to complete his happiness was a beautiful companion, with a heart like his own .-Frank was as fine a young fellow as ever rallied around the Timecanoe flag, and might have cut quite a conspicuous figure in the world, if he had been gifted with less diffidence.

Frank soon came to a decision. He silently nominated to the highest office in the gift of his affections, a young lady who was, in every particular, worthy of his noble heart. ing cherry-cheeked, cheerful, capricious creature of a cousin-about as old as himself and endowed with a proper share of that good common sense for which our fair countrywomen are so eminently distinguished all over the world. Frank Smith embarked enthusiastically in the double care of love and politics. He carried both with him, hand in hand; but it might have been observed, that he conducted one cause with elequent words and the other with eloquent looks. He often told his fuir cousin Tilly, that General Harrison was his choice for the highest office in the gift of the people, but never once did he tell her that she was his only choice for the highest post in his own gift. But why should he have teld her so? She knew it as well as he did. His eyes had many a time told her a story too plainly to be misunderstood.

Frank made at least a dozen attempts to disclose his feelings to his cousin, but his lips invariably refused to obey the promptings of his heart.

One evening just before the Presidential election, the two were together engaged, as every body else was, in talking over political matters, for Tillys, like all other pretty girls, was a thorough-going Harrisonian.

'Cousin Tilly," said Frank, 'it is now certain that Old Tip will be our next President. The people will then once more be prosperous-business will revive, and those young men who have all along hesitated about changing their condition, may now just as well look out for helpmates. What say you to that ?'

'I certainly think,' said she, 'that our sex should now, that this long contest is about to close, receive a share of their attentions,'

'Yes, cousin Tilly, Harrison is good for the next four years-that's certain: You my heels. have noticed, cousin Tilly, that I am heartily ired of this confounded bachelor's life; and from the attentions I have paid to you, the object of my affec-that is-the-the-that you are the-I was about to-oh! listen to that glorious Tippecanoe song in the streets!

For all the world seems turning round, For Tippecanoe and Tyler too!

Frank's incoherent love-speeches were cut short, fortunately for him by a crowd in the than purity of conscience" street singing lustily the famous song of Tippecanoe and Tyler too.'

. Really, cousin Frank,' said Tilly 'you are not fit for any thing but to talk politics. 'I am afraid there is too much truth in what you say,' replied Frank, 'but still, I must insist that I tried my best to tell you my thoughts upon a different subject.'

"And why did you not finish telling them?" said his cousin archly.

· Because I was too much of a blockhead,

A bold Tippecanoe soldier truly! You need not fear me, cousin Frank ; I am only a woman." So you are, cousin; but I must confes that I am the greatest coward on earth when I attempt to open my heart to you.' "Most astonishing,' said Tilly.

'All very true, my cousin. You know full well-I know you do-that I have long entertained a deep-what was I going to say? I don't believe Van will get more than six States at the outside.

in charge of old Tip's 'keepers,' you are going crazy.

I believe so myself. I am in a bad box I assure you, Cousin Tilly; tell me how to get out of this confounded quandary. You know what I want to tell you. How shall I

I say it ?" Don't know, said Tilly. 'Cousin,' said Frank imploringly.

· I'll bet you that Harrison will be elected, Oh! but I would bet that way myself," replied Frank. "You wished me to help you out of your quandary, cousin Frank; You must therefore take the bet."

. What do you want to bet,' enquired . Against what ?'

But let me see,' said Frank, who was somewhat puzzled to understand the operation of the wager, 'if I should lose, as I surely will, how will it then be?"

'If you lose,' said she, 'I will win you; and if I lose you will win me.' Either way will suit you, I suppose.

'I see through it,' exclaimed Frank, in an ecstacy of joy. 'Done, done, done. Give me your hand,—Hurralı for Tip, and Ty, and Till. Consin, you have done the business gloriously; I am happy. The election came and Harrison carried the day. Of course, cousin Tilly won the bet, They celebrated old Tip's election a few evenings ago, by a merry wedding-Joy be with them.

A GLORIOUS RECORD. At New London, Connecticut, the following in cription is found on a grave-stone. The records of ancient Rome or Greece do not exhibit a nobler instance of patriotic heroism:

" On the 20th October, 1781, 4,000 English fell upon the town with fire and sword -700 Americans defended the fort for a whole day; but in the evening about 4 o'clock, it was taken. The commander of the besieged delivered up his sword to an Englishman, who immediately stabbed him; She was a distant family counexion, a charm- all his comrades were put to the sword. A line of powder was then laid from the magazine of the fort to the sea, there to be lighted, thus to blow the fort into the air. William Hotman, who lay not far distant, wounded by three strokes of the bayonet in his body, beheld it, and said to one of his wounded friends, who was also still alive. "We will endeavour to crawl to the lines; we will completely wet the powder with our blood; thus will we, with the little life that remains to us, save the fort and magazine, and perhaps a few of our comrades who are only wounded." He alone had strength to accomplish this noble design. In his thirtieth year he died on the powder, which he overflowed with his blood. His friends and seven of his wounded companions by that means had their lives preserved." After this simple narrative, are the following words in large characters, HERE RESTS WILLIAM HOTMAN.

HENRY CLAY.

When this distinguished Statesman was Secretary of State, a dancing master, by the name of Henry Clay, happened to be traveling in some part of the State of Virginia .-Alighting at a public house, for some refreshments, it so happened that mine host accidentally learned his name. Supposing him to be the Secretary of State, the principal men of the village were invited in to pay their respects to Mr. Clay. When they came into his room, the dancing-master perceiving the mistake which had very naturally taken place, he addressed them as follows - " Gentlemen, I perceive there is some mistake in this business. You doubtless suppose me to be the Secretary of State. It so happens that we have both the same name, and are about the some height, but then there is just six feet difference in our talents, for his lie in his head, and mine in Innocence .- Judge Conrad says truly. that dangerous errors have frequently resulted from a loose and careless construction of the emotions of the person accused. Innocence should be brave, but it is not always so. It is often palpitating and fearful, when guilt confronts the eye of justice with a cold and brazen hardihood. It is, after all, more a question as to strength of nerves my and others, valued at $1225. Taxes due for 1838

This medicine is highly and justly recommended, by numerous and respectable individuals, who have found relief from its use. Many who have been labouring under protracted Coughs and Pains in the Breist, and have been supposed by themselves and their friends far advanced in Consumption, have been happily restored to perfect health by the use of this valuable Expectorant.

Extract of a Certificate from Rev. Dr. Babcock, late President of Waterville College, Maine. Prom intimale personal acquaintance with Dr. D. Jayne, a regular student of the Medical University of Pennsylvania, and an experienced, successful practitioner of medicine, I was prepared to appreciate the numerous testimonials in favour of his different medical preparations, much more highly than the great majority of those which are extensively eulogised. On trial of them in my own family, and some of them personally. I have more than realized their favourable anticipations. They are what they profess to benot quack nostrums-but skilfully prepared antidotes for some of the most afflictive of human cliseases. > Jayne's Expectorant .- We invite attention to this mirable remedy for Pulmonary affections, advertised in another column. The principle there announced of the morbid character of obstructions—its tendency to originate inflammation of the Bronchie, and consequent vitiation of the natural humors—is, beyond dispute, the truth itself. The only practicable mode of removing such obstruction, is by means of expectorstion, a result which we are convinced can always be obtained by a judicious exhibition of the remedy of Dr. Jayne.—Philadelphia Spirit of the Times.
