AMERICAN CHRONOLOGY.

REMARKABLE EVENTS.

1799. PAUL JONES obtained a novel victory on the coast of Scotland, September 23.
1780. Sir Henry Clinton who had sailed from New York near the close of 1779, opened his batteries on the first of April, this year, against Charleston, S. C. which place surrendered to him the 12th of May. Shortly after Sir Henry returned to N. Y., leaving 4000 men for the Southern service under Lord Cornwallis.
The British under Tarleton, surprised the Americans under Buford, at Waxsaw, where 300 Americans were massacred.
The American General Sumpter, distinguished himself in various skirmishes with detachments of the British army in Carolina. Arrival of 6000 French troops under Count Rochambeau, to aid the Americans.
Battle near Camden, South Carolina. The Americans, commanded by General Gates, were defeated with a loss of 7 or 800 men, amongst whom was BARON DE KALB, a Prussian volunteer in the American service and second in command.
Gen. Arnold offered to deliver up West Point to the British. The base plot was however fortunately discovered, upon which Arnold deserted to the British Army, and Maj. Andre, an Adjutant General in the British service, who was employed to carry on the negotiations was taken, tried, condemned and executed as a spy.
A detachment of the British army, under Ferguson, was defeated at King's Mountain, North Carolina, by Colo. Campbell, Shelby, and Sevier, in October.
Henry Laurens ambassador of the U. S. to Holland, was captured by a British frigate, Dr. Franklin obtained money from France and Holland.
It has been stated that twenty thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine British recruits and troops were sent to America and to the West Indies during this and the two preceding years.
Congress appointed Gen. Green to succeed Gen. Gates in the command of the Southern army who entered upon the command in December.
1781. The beginning of this year was noted for the revolt of the Pennsylvania troops commanded by Gen. Wayne. The cause of this mutiny was the want of provisions, pay and clothing. It was soon quelled by the wise and decisive conduct of Washington, and soon after Congress redressed their grievances.
Towards the close of the last, and commencement of this year, the traitor Arnold committed various depredations along the coast of Virginia.
Battle at the Cowpens, the first action in the South after Greene assumed the command. The English under Tarleton were defeated by the Americans under Morgan, with a loss of 300 killed and 500 prisoners—American loss 12 killed and 60 wounded. This was one of the most brilliant victories achieved during the revolutionary war. Morgan's force scarcely exceeded 500, while the enemy's was upwards of 1000. Though some have said that Morgan commanded 900 and Tarleton 1400. There can be no doubt but Tarleton's force doubled that of Morgan's. He commanded the flower of the British army and Morgan's brigade were mostly militia. The battle was fought on the 17th of Jan.
On hearing of the defeat of Tarleton, Cornwallis destroyed his heavy baggage, and marched after Morgan who was soon joined by General Greene, and on the 15th of March the armies met at Guilford Court House, N. C. where a severe but indecisive battle was fought.
Soon after the battle at Guilford the American detachments under Marion, Sumpter and Pickens gained several advantages over the British and Tories. One post after another was evacuated by them until they were soon masters of none except Ninety Six and Charleston.
Execution of Col. Hayne as a rebel by the British, which was only one of the many horrid barbarities practised by them and their allies under Tarleton and Rawdon.
The British under the traitor Arnold took Fort Griswold and wantonly burned New-London in Connecticut.
Battle at the Red Bank Springs, gained by the Americans. The British loss was eleven hundred, and of the Americans five hundred. During this year the Americans gained several naval battles.
In the last of September, the American army under General Washington, and the French army and fleet under Count Rochambeau, Lafayette and Degraze, their united forces amounting to near 10,000 men, defeated Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown. Gen. Washington had for a considerable time been determined that a general attack should be made on some important point, and had used every means in his power to make General Clinton whose headquarters were at New York, believe that that place would be the point, and so well did he succeed that before Clinton was aware of his real designs, he had marched his army too far to be pursued with safety. On the 6th of October, the American batteries were opened in due form, and after sustaining the siege until the 19th, Lord Cornwallis surrendered the army and fleet to the combined forces. The prisoners taken amounted to 7,073 exclusive of seamen, besides a great number of cannon &c.

1781. The surrender of Lord Cornwallis was considered as giving a decisive character to the war. In March this year, Lord North resigned his office as prime minister, a new cabinet was formed which advised the king to discontinue the prosecution of the war. Gen. Clinton was removed from command in America and Gen. Carleton appointed to succeed him.
John Adams concluded a treaty with Holland, which government acknowledged the independence of America.
During this year the independence of America was also acknowledged by Sweden, Denmark, and Russia.
Preliminary articles of peace between England and America were signed at Paris on the 30th of November, by John Adams, Benj. Franklin, John Jay, and Henry Laurens, American commissioners, and Mr. Fitzherbert and Mr. Oswald, commissioners on the part of Great Britain.
1783. By official accounts furnished the British Parliament, 43,633 men exclusive of officers, had been killed or died in the American service, and the sum expended in the war amounted to $645,615,455.
A definite treaty between England and the United States was signed in September, and the independence of the United States acknowledged by Great Britain.
A formal proclamation had been made in April for the cessation of hostilities. Savannah was evacuated in July; New York in November, and Charleston soon after.
On the 3d of November the army was disbanded. In December, General Washington delivered his farewell address to his officers, resigned his commission to Congress, and retired to Mt. Vernon, an unstained patriot and the admiration of the world. A man, declared by the noble Mr. Wirt, to be "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."
