But I was chiefly affected by the relics of two persons, of whom the world has unfortunately heard too much; the ill-fated brothers, John and Henry Shearers. I had been told that they were here, and the moment the taper fell upon the spot they occupy, I quickly recognised them by one or two circumstances that forcibly recalled the close of their career; the headless trunks, and the remains of the coarse, unadorned, penal shells, to which it seemed necessary to public justice that they should be consigned. Henry's head was lying by his brother's side; and John's had not been completely detached by the blow of the executioner : one of the ligaments of the neck still connects it with the body. I knew nothing of these victims of ill-timed enthusiasm except from historical reports; but the companion of my visit to their grave had been their contemporary and friend, and he paid their memories the tribute of some tears ; which, even at this distance of time, it would not be predent to shed in a less privileged place. The number of pupils is limited to sixteen, and no one will be admitted who is over fourteen years of age. The Institution offers to Parents and Guardians an opportunity of placing their Children and Wards under the care of a Physician, whose whole time is devoted to the School, at an age when errors in diet and regimen often lay the foundation of disease and debility for life. A knowledge of the human frame and constitution, and of the laws of health, seems indispensable to those who are entrusted with the physical, mental, and moral training of youth, to whom too much or too little exposure, excessive or deficient bodily or mental labor, are alike productive of evil-For want of this knowledge, the child born with a feeble constitution is often unnecessarily dooned to physical weakness for life, and many are made to experi ence in hypochondria and insanity the evils of overtasking the brain in childhood. The Institution of fers also another advantage, in the opportunity given of secluding lads from promiscuous intercourse with others, and from the influence of older boys, while it gives to them all the advantages of an education in a community of equals. The plan of the School is to secure, first, as most important, perfect accuracy of recitation in all cases admitting of it-full opportunition, or the same will be taken pro confesso, and set ty for every Pupil to make such progress as he may be able, without regard to that of others, and, only is entire subordination to these two objects, the advantages of study in classes. It is believed that by a pro per arrangement, the latter may he to some extent secured without detriment to the former. The ordinary mode of measuring merit by the degree of approach toward accuracy, while the Student is forced through an author at a given rate, puts an end to the pleasure and utility of knowledge, and to certainty, its very essence. A person educated under such a system, knows very little. His assertions may be generally correct, but if not admitted immediately by others, he begins himself to question their truth. The Pupil is said, after a certain time, to be fit for a College or a Counting-house, but is found unfit to enter either, of obtains admission only to drag along under the burden of past inaccuracies. The system adopted in the FAMILY SCHOOL has been tested during an experience of several years, with entire success, even in the case of some whose habits were formed under different instruction. The English, Classical Scientific, and Mathematical branches, are taught solely by the Principal, who is thus enabled to secure uniform of teaching and discipline, and, as far as possible, to guard against exacting too much or too little labor from any pupil. One great object aimed at, is to give a knowledge of principles, and the power of applying them; and the test of merit is the ability to ed and repaired in his accustomed appearing style produce the results, and not the mere repetition of a Gold and Gilver manufactured to order, with extend chance, it may be, and partly by the sid of others.
