THE SOLDIER'S SON-IN-LAW.

A young Englishman, from gaming, love affairs, and other such gold scattering enjoyments, had so nearly reached the dregs of his great-grandfather's hereditary portion, that he could calculate the departing hour of his last guinea. As one evening he was returning home from one of those haunts of dissipation which he habitually frequented, feeble in body as in mind, and for the first time in life, casting a firm look upon the ruins of his fortune, he could not well determine whether he should and his troubles by drawing a trigger, or by throwing himself into the Thames.

While he was thus wavering between fire and water, the very profound idea occurred to him not to lay violent hands on himself, but to allow himself to be conducted out of the labyrinth of poverty by the fair hand of some wealthy bride. With this consoling thought he went to bed, and already in nocturnal visions the rapid racers flew, the fair girls frisked around him, both of which, he was happy in thinking he might maintain in future upon the dowry of his wife.

On the following morning he reflected anew upon his plan, and found it unexceptionable in every point excepting the very circumstance of not knowing where he was to find the rich heiress he wanted. In London, where all the world regarded him as a spendthrift, it was not once to be thought of—he saw that for the future he must throw his nets out elsewhere.

After much cogitation and searching he at last hit upon an old rich Colonel, living upon his own estate, about twenty miles from the capital, who fortunately had no acquaintance in London, and was the father of an only daughter.

Into the house of this gentleman, by means of a friend, to whom he promised half the booty, he got himself introduced and received. The daughter of the Col. was an awkward country-girl, with round chubby cheeks like Ruben's cherubims, and looked particularly odd in the hand-me-down attire of her sainted mother, which did not at all fit her, and was of course not of the most fashionable cut. Her mind, too, was as attractive as her attire; she could only talk of hens and geese; and if any other topic came above-board, her conversation was limited to a 'yes,' or a 'no,' all beyond this seemed to her sinful.

This wooden puppet was indeed a mighty contrast to the sprightly, gay, and lively nymphs with whom the young Briton had, until this period, been toying; but he carefully confined to the solitude of his own bosom the disagreeable feeling of this heaven and earth distant difference. His flattering tongue called the girl's stiltiness celestial innocence; and her swollen cheeks, he likened to the beauty of the full-blown damask rose. The end of the song was, he turned to the father, and sued warmly for his daughter's hand.

The Colonel in his sixty years' career through the world, had collected this much knowledge of mankind, that however silly the young man had masked himself, he could, nevertheless, discover the fortune hunter peeping through the disguise. At first, therefore, he thought of peremptorily refusing him permission to woo his daughter; but, on the other hand, he thought, 'the youth is fashionable, and perhaps I may be doing him injustice; he, as yet, betrays no anxiety about the portion, and why should the girl, who is marriageable, remain longer at home? His request shall be granted—but his apparent disinterestedness shall stand a decisive trial!'

The suitor was then informed that the father had no objection to the match, provided his daughter would give her consent; and she, poor thing, replied, as in duty bound—'My father's will is mine.' Indeed could any thing else be expected?

In the course of a few weeks the marriage ceremony was performed at the country house of the Colonel, and he instantly made his son-in-law acquainted with his wife's portion, amounting to thirty thousand dollars. The dissembler acted as if he wished to know nothing of the matter, and solemnly avowed that he had not as yet thought on such things but had regarded only the noble qualities of his charming wife, whose pure self was dearer to him than all the treasures of the world.

Upon this they sat down to dinner, and the father in law urged and begged that they would make as much haste as possible, as it was his intention that the young married couple should set off that very afternoon for London, and that he should accompany them.

The son in law was confounded, and began to make some excuses about travelling on the first day of their happiness; but the soldier maintained that these were futile, assuring him that he had particular reasons for proceeding forthwith to the capital, and that his matrimonial joys would be as well realized in London as in the country. What was to be done? Why, the journey was immediately undertaken. The old man secured in a small casket, before the eyes of the bridegroom, the portion of the bride, partly in gold and partly in bank notes, took it under his arm, and placed himself by the side of the young people in the carriage.

The road ran through a forest, and scarcely had they fairly entered it when two horsemen darted out from the brushwood, with masks upon their faces, and stopped the carriage. One of the persons watched the postillion with a presented pistol, while the other approaching the coach window said—'We are adventurers, and request you to give up instantly the portion of the bride!'

The colonel and his son in law swore and ranted but the robber coolly insisted upon his demand. After some parleying, however, the horseman bent towards the young man, and whispered in his ear—'That you may see that we are reasonable men, we leave you the choice of two things—give us either the bride or her portion: for certain reasons it is quite immaterial to us, and moreover, no one shall ever know your decision.'

'The bridegroom did not think long about the matter, for he whispered—'Take the bride!' 'Brother,' cried the robber to his companion.

In the twinkling of an eye the soldier seized his gentle son in law by the neck, shook him violently, and exclaimed with a thundering voice—'Ha! villain! so my conjecture was not unfounded, that you cared not for my daughter, but merely for her fortune! Heaven be praised that my child and my money are not yet irrecoverably in your clutches! Know, then, knave! the man who married you was no clergyman, he was a brother-soldier, in the priest's attire; and these gentlemen are no high-waymen, but friends who have done me the service of proving you—Since, then, you have laid open your whole villainy, we shall have no more connection. I shall return home with my daughter and my money, and you may go to London—or to the devil, if you like.'

With these words he transplanted the astonished bridegroom with a kick from the carriage to the road, and ordered the postillion to turn about. The outlaw trudged back to London, and had, while upon the road, the fairest and best opportunity of determining whether he should now use a pistol, or throw himself into the river.

THRILLING STORY—A FIFTH AT WHIST.

We had been playing all the evening at whist. Our stake had been gold mohur and points, and twenty on the rubber. Maxey, who is always lucky, had won five consecutive bumpers, which lent a self satisfied smile to his countenance, and made us, the losers, look any thing but pleased, when he suddenly changed countenance, and hesitated to play: this the more surprised us, since he was one who seldom pondered, being so perfectly master of the game, that he deemed long consideration superfluous.

'Play away, Maxey; what are you about?' impatiently demanded Churchill, one of the most impetuous youths that ever wore the uniform of the body guard.

'Hush!' responded Maxey, in a tone which thrilled through us, and at the same time turning deadly pale.

'Are you unwell?' said another, about to start up, for he believed our friend had suddenly been taken ill.

'For the love of peace, sit quiet!' rejoined the other, in a tone denoting extreme fear or pain, and he laid down his cards. 'If you value my life, move not.'

'What can he mean?—has he taken leave of his senses?' demanded Churchill appealing to myself.

'Don't stir!—don't move, I tell you!' in sort of whisper I never can forget, uttered Maxey. 'If you make any sudden motion, I am a dead man!'

We exchanged looks. He continued—'Remain quiet, and all may yet be well. I have a Cobra Capella round my leg!'

Our first impulse was to draw back our chairs; but an appealing look from the victim induced us to remain, although we were aware, that should the reptile transfer but one fold, and attach himself to any other of the party, that individual might already be counted as a dead man, so fatal is the bite of that dreaded monster.

Poor Maxey was dressed as many old residents still dress in India—namely, in breeches and silk stockings; he therefore the more plainly felt every movement of the snake. His countenance assumed a livid hue; the words seemed to leave his mouth without that feature altering its position, so rigid was his look—so fearful was he lest the slightest muscular movement should alarm the serpent, and hasten his fatal bite.

We were in agony little less than his own during the scene.

'He is coiling round!' murmured Maxey: 'I feel him cold—cold to my limb: and now he tightens!—for the love of heaven call for some milk!—I dare not speak loud: let it be placed on the ground near me; let some be spilt on the floor.'

Churchill carefully gave the order, and a servant carefully slipped out of the room.

'Don't stir! Northcot, you moved your head. By everything sacred, I conjure you not to do so again! It cannot be long ere my fate is decided. I have a wife and two children in Europe; tell them that I died blessing them—that my last prayers were for them; the snake is winding itself round my calf;—I leave them all I possess—I can almost fancy I feel his breath. Great Heaven to die in such a manner!'

The milk was brought, and put down: a few drops were sprinkled on the floor, and the affrighted serpent drew back.

Again Maxey spoke:

'No—no! it has no effect! on the contrary he has clasped himself the tighter—he has uncurled his upper fold! I dare not look down, for I am sure he is about to draw back and give the bite of death more fatal precision! Again he pauses. I die firm; but this is past endurance;—ah! no—he has undone another fold, and loosens himself. Can he be going to some one else? We involuntarily started. 'For the gracious love of Heaven, stir not!—I am a dead man; but bear with me. He still loiters;—he is about to dart! Move not, but beware! Churchill, he falls off that way. Oh! this agony is too hard to bear!—Another pressure, and I am dead.—No!—he relaxes!' At that moment poor Maxey ventured to look down; the snake had unwound himself; the coil had fallen, and the reptile was making for the milk.

'I am saved!—saved!' and Maxey bounded from his chair, and fell senseless into the arms of one of his servants. In another instant, need it be added, we were all dispersed: the snake was killed, and our poor friend carried more dead than alive to his room.

'That scene I can never forget: it dwells on memory still strengthened by the fate of poor Maxey, who from that hour pined in hopeless imbecility, and sunk into an early grave.—Hours in Hindostan.'

A humorous author compares love to the small pox. The longer it is in making its appearance, the more violent is the disorder.

A quaint writer most quaintly saith, that soldiers die wholesale by the musket, and retail by nature.

A coquette has been compared to those light wines, which every one tastes, but none buys.

He was a Norman, who remarked, that going to law, was the art of cutting one's throat with a pen.

Rabelais tells us of a story of one Philpot Placut, who, being brisk and hale, fell dead as he was paying an old debt; which perhaps causes many, says he, not to pay their fear of the like accident.

A CARD.

The Subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public generally, that he has taken and fitted up the House on the South-west corner of Hillsborough street, in the City of Raleigh, opposite the State Capitol (formerly kept as a Tavern,) as a HOTEL AND HOUSE OF ENTERTAINMENT, for the accommodation of Travellers and others, under the name and title of the

"PEOPLE'S HOUSE."

He has been at much expense in repairing and refitting the same, and therefore earnestly solicits a share of the public patronage. The undersigned has had considerable experience as an Innkeeper, both in this State and at the North, and flatters himself that he can please those who shall honor him with their custom. His charges shall be in conformity with the times and the prices of provisions. It is usual in such announcements, to make large promises to the public, which are in many instances never realized.—The Subscriber will make none, for to those who have known him as a Public house keeper, it is unnecessary to say, come and try, and judge for themselves. The Public's humble servant. JOHN ZIEGENFUSS, 43 Raleigh, May 24, 1841.

N. B. Genteel Regular Boarders, with or without rooms, can be accommodated at the People's House, on reasonable terms.

Important sale OF TOWN LOTS.

Will be sold at Sheriff's, Cleveland County, North Carolina, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 4th, 5th and 6th of October next, the Town Lots of said Town. The Town is located upon a tract of land containing Two hundred Acres, nearly the whole of which is laid off into lots, and will be for sale to the highest bidder.

SHELBY is the seat of Justice of the New County of Cleveland, established at the last session of the Legislature. It is situated about midway between Rutherfordton and Lincolnton, and about 30 miles from Yorkville and Spartanburg C. H. S. Carolina, near the road crossing Broad River at Quinn's Ferry, upon a beautiful level Ridge, free from mud, and only ONE MILE and a HALF from WILSON'S SULPHUR SPRINGS.

The Subscribers are sure, that to those persons desirous of procuring an agreeable and healthy residence, no place could present greater advantages. The situation is high, dry, and healthy. It is well watered, near Broad River, and the settled neighborhood. There are a large number of Saw Mills near, and every other convenience for building, and WILSON'S SPRINGS only fifteen minutes ride distant. Nothing is necessary to be said of the character of these Springs. They are regarded as being inferior to none in the Southern country, and hundreds of invalids can attest their healing properties. Within a hundred yards of the Wilson's White Sulphur Springs, there is a red Sulphur, and a Chalybeate Spring, and there are several other Sulphur Springs in the immediate neighborhood of Shelby, though none equal to Wilson's for medicinal properties. It is certain, too, that as soon as the Town gets under way, the line of Stages, tri-weekly and four horse coaches, from Raleigh to Asheville, and thence to Nashville, Tenn. and also from Spartanburg C. H. to Lincolnton, will pass through, affording every reasonable mail facility. In short, nothing is wanting to make it one of the most delightful spots on earth, except—a plentiful supply of good inhabitants, and we wish all such to come and buy.

FIFTY THOUSAND ACRES OF Swamp Land For Sale.—The President and Directors of the Literary Fund of North Carolina, to whose care and management was committed by law, an appropriation of $200,000, for making an experiment in draining and reclaiming the Swamp Lands belonging to the State, having succeeded in part, do now make known, that in pursuance of the authority vested in them by the General Assembly, a Public Sale of a portion of said Land, will take place on the premises, on the last day of November next.

The body of Land reclaimed, and now offered for Sale, embraces about 50,000 acres; is situate in the County of Hyde, and State of North Carolina, and divides the waters flowing into the Allameter, from those that run into Pamlico Sound.

The drainage, conducted at different periods by two Scientific Engineers, Messrs CHAS. B. SHAW, and WALTER GWYN, has been effected by two main drains, called Pungo and Alligator Canals, together with sundry Tributaries or lateral ditches.

Pungo Canal is about 6½ miles long, with an average width at bottom of 22 feet, depth of 6 feet, and fall at bottom of 12 feet.

Alligator Canal is about 6 miles long, with an average width at bottom of 30 feet, depth of 7, and fall of 10 feet.

These Canals empty into the navigable waters of Pamlico Sound, and are accessible by Vessels engaged in the Coasting Trade.

A large portion of this land abounds in Juniper, Cypress and other timber of the best kind. Another portion consists of Prairies, covered with Cane and Bamboo, and according to the Report of the Engineers above named, the soil is of surpassing fertility.

The sale will be by Public Auction to the highest bidder, in quarter Sections of 160 acres each; will take place at Pungo Canal on Tuesday, the 30th day of November next, and will be conducted by the President and Directors of the Literary Fund in person.
