Pedro di Grastienburg, a gentleman who had inherited from his forefathers an exalted birth and pedigree, and had also received from them what he considered as good as either-an boast more bravery than he had possessed in his youth, and his deeds of gallantry and acts of daring, those characteristics of the Spanish nation, were unparalleled. He had early joined the standard of his Sovereign and had been his particular favorite; but as he advanced in years, feeling a desire for retirement, he had asked, and had received the daughter) had but seldom appeared in public. and the wedding day was again appointed. Her parents were extravagantly fond of her, almost as secluded from the world as if she had in reality become a nun and had taken the veil; but she was continually storing and gracing her mind (her personal appearance) needed no afteration) with knowledge and accomplishments. In this manner did Inez pass her time, till she had completed her eighteenth year. About this time the Governor of Villa Nulva, a town two or three necessary writings, and Don Sebastian and Donna Inez were betrothed without ever a gentleman of first rate talents and abilities, eyes, and his elegantly curled mustachios lest little to be added in the point of beauty. He had heard Inez spoken of in terms of ad-

Previous to her marriage, Inez was invited tive, and her parents thinking it advisable that she should see a little of the world, con-sented, though reluctantly. It was at a masquerade which she attended, where the Knight. scene occurred with which the tale is commenced. Among the beauty and fashion of Madrid, Inez, (for she it was masked as the de Grastienburg." flower girl) stood most conspicuous. The neatness so happily blended with elegance, with which she was attired, and her agreeable occupation, were too striking not to be noticed, and when noticed could not fail to be admired. Her sparkling eyes beaming with good nature and affability could be seen through the holes in the mask, and besides being a stranger, she was doubly interesting. She several times in the course of the evening, perceived the eyes of a person masked as a knight errant, fixed on her with an expression which she, not being skilled in the lore of love could not understand.-After this when they were separated, those eyes and that expression were before her imagination.

Inez, while stopping to collect her flowers was startled by a voice at her side, and looking up beheld the knight who addressed her ceived by

" Fair damsel, I crave a boon; allow me, an unworthy knight, but the avowed protector, of innocence, to assist you in gathering up those scattered flowers.' Inez was so agitated (though she knew not why) as not to be able to reply, when by an unlucky ac-cident the string of her mask broke and it fell to the floor. At the same moment our At the same moment our knight tore his mask off, Inez did not know that she ought to have replaced her maskdid not know that it was dangerous to suffer man to behold such charms, and did make one effort to resume her mask, but allowed him to conduct her to a seat in the Garden. Here, while conversing, Inez by some unaccountable mystery, thought of her engagement to Sebastian, and a tear rolled down her cheek .-She was surprised. This idea had never given her a moment of pain or pleasure, and why it should now cause the tear was what she could not account for, but she quickly wiped it away as she listened to Sir Knight, who could not restrain his ardor, and under the beautiful and odoriferous orange and lemon trees, inhaling the pure air, in a ' moon-" May it please your Majesty to purchase light eve,' Inez had the first tale of love poursome flowers of a poor mountain maiden, ed into her (in these matters) inexperienced who travelled many a long mile before the ears. MUSIC.

Our amusements, the employments with which we occupy our leisure hours, have much to do with the formation of our characters. The man who seeks pleasure in boisterous mirth and midnight revelry, rarely proves a kind husband or a tender father; and the boy who delights to exercise wanton cruelty on the humblest insect, is rurely an agreeable playmate or a dutiful son ;-whilst he whose recreations are of a soher and a rational character, is most commonly a pleasant companion and a peaceful neighbor. To the young, to all engaged in their education, or interested in their well-being, this is a subject of much interest, and no efforts should be spared to give a right direction to the love of pleasure so strong in youth .-Hence arises the the usefulness of infusing early into the youthful mind a taste for intellectual pleasures; and inspiring a love for variety of other rich Goods. the finer arts before a thirst is contracted for more dangerous amusements; of these none s more laudable or more improving than a knowledge and love of music; no one interferes less with other studies or improvements -the amount of time necessary for the attaiment of a tolerable proficiency is not great glasses, that may be adjusted in any frame, at a moand the expense is inconsiderable.

But Music is not to be regarded merely as an amusement, nor are its advantages confined to the young-Who, "that hath music in his soul" has not felt his troubled spirit calmed, his heart softened and his love warmed, when engaged in the calm and sweet evening hymn:

" Let not the spirits of the air. While I repose, my soul ensuare; But guard thy suppliant, free from harms, Safe in thine everlasting arms."

gust, A. D. 1841. J. L. HENDERSON.

THE wonderful cures effected by this are the all engrassing subjects of the day.
where you will, and you hear of nothing but Mr. Su a. One has been cured by Dr. PETERS VEGETA-BLE PILLS, or, you know Mrs. So-and So was at the point of death, but she has been cured by Dr. PE-TERS'S PILLS; or, are you not glad that Miss has been restored to health by Dr. Perkil's wonnous MEDICINE.

Really, this medicine must be very good, or it could not care so many. It is good. For many years it has passed on in the "even, silent tener of its way." curing hundreds of persons who were wrangling with death. But now its onward course is impetuous. It is as impossible to stay the demand for this med icine, as to hush the rushing wind.

A life medicine that will prortastinate death for many years, shall it not enter every house? Shall it not be used by every individual? Let no man say, I don't want it. You know not what to-morrow may bring forth. All should use this remody, and remember tha health is the first blessing from God."

The immense and increasing popularity of these Pills, is another, proof of the infallibility of the old dage, that "truth is powerful and will prevail." Other Pills are only puffed, but Dr. Peters's are purchased and praised, and recommended until the demand for them has become almost universal.

Dr. Peters would impress this fact upon the public, that his public are not quark madicing.

that his rules are not quack medicine; but a scientific compound of simples, which has been the result of many years' intense application to a profession in which he was regularly bred; hence it is as popular with the regular faculty as with the people at large.

One of the many peculiar virtues of the Vegetable Pills, is, that while very powerful in their effects, they are particularly mild and gentle in their action. Unlike the generality of medicine, their application is never attended with passes or griping.

never attended with nausea or griping. Peters's Vegetable Pills are now regarded by those who have had an opportunity to decide upon their me-rits, as an inestimable public blessing. Without an exception in any age or country, no me-dicine has spread with such rapidity and given such universal satisfaction. The above Pills are for sale in the City of Ra eigh, by Messra. WILLIAMS & HATWOOD, and W. M. MASON & Co.; and in Fayetteville, by E. J. HALB, at New York prices. May, 1841.
