THE FOOL'S PENCE.

In the year 183-, in a handsome furnished parlor which opened out of that noted London gin-shop, called "The Punch-Bowl," sat its mistress, the gandily dressed Mrs. neighbor.

"Why Mrs. Crowder, I really must say excellent health." you have things in the first style! What elegant papering! what noble chairs! what | we never catch a sight of you now?" a pair of fire screens ! all so bright and fresh! how do you manage ?"

tomers. "The fool's pence!-'tis THE FOOL's PENCE that does it for us," she said. And her voice rose, more shrill and loud than usual, with the triumph she felt.

Her words reached the ears of one customer,-George Manly, the carpenter, who stood near the counter. Turning his eyes upon those around him, he saw pale, sunken cheeks, inflamed eyes, and ragged garments. He then turned them upon the stately apartment; he looked through the door into the parlor, and saw looking-glasses, and pictures, and gilding, and fine furniture, and a rich carpet, and Miss Lucy in a gorgeous silk gown, at her piano : and he thought to himself, how strange it is! how curious that all this wretchedness on my left hand should be made to turn into all this rich finery on my right!

· Well sir, -and what's for you?' said the shrill voice which had made the fools' pence ring in his ears

A glass of gin, ma'am, is what I was waiting for; but I think I've paid the last fool's pence that I shall put down on this counter for many a long day.'

Manly hastened home. His wife and his two little girls were seated at work. They were thin and pale, really for the want of food. The room looked very cheerless, and their fire was so small as hardly to be felt yet the dullest observer would have been struck by the neatness that reigned.

It was a joyful surprise to them, his returning so early that night, and returning sober, and in good humor.

'Your eyes are weak to-night, wife,' said George, ' or else you have been crying. I'm afraid you work too much by candle light.' His wife smiled and said, 'working does not hurt my eyes; and she beckoned to her little boy, who was standing apart, in a corner-evidently as a culprit. 'Why, John, what's this I see?' said his father. 'Come tell me what you have been .doing.'

John was a plain spoken boy, and had straight-forward way. He came up to his father, and looked full in his face, and said, 'The baker came for his money to-night, and would not leave the loaves without it; but though he was cross and rough, he said mother was not to blame, and that he was sure tears dropping on her hands, and then I said bloody scenes of war. bad words, and mother sent me in the corner.'

look themselves again,' Mrs. Crowder, who comrades. was lolling in a large arm-chair, and amusing herself by a stare at every one and every thing in the room, suddenly started forward, caught her eye, 'Why my good man, we are old friends! I know your face, I'm certain: still there is some change in you, tho' I can't exactly say what it is.'

Crowder, conversing with an obsequious health, said George Manly, smiling : now, ed, the theatre would have been reduced to Where can you find the needful looks, and decent clothes, I'll match them for all these things? Dear Mrs. Crowder, with any man's wife and children. And now madam, I tell you, as you told a friend of Mrs. Crowder simpered, and cast a look yours one day last year,—'tis the fool's pence of smiling contempt through the half opened that has done all this for us. 'The Fool's door, into the shop, filled with drouthy cus. pence !- I ought rather to say, the pence earned by industry; and spent so that we can ask the blessings of God upon the pence.'

Mrs. Crowder never recovered the customer she had lost.

THE COUNTESS EMILY PLATER.

A life of this distinguished female has been translated by J. K. Salomonski a Polish exile, and may be found at J. Leavitt's No. 14 John Street N. Y. This woman, Tobacco, and for sale at the North Carolina Book our readers may remember, took a conspicu. Store, at a low price. ous part in the revolution of 1830, by which Poland endeavored to emancipate herself from the tyranny of Russia. At the age of twenty five, she put on the dress of a man, and having been accomplished in the use of arms, encouraged the Peasants of Lithuania to insurrection, and, at the head of a considerable force, achieved a victory at Jezorossy over a superior number of the Russians.-She afterwards joined the corps of Zaluski, and participated in the severe action which took place at Prxystrwiany. During the battle, she was in the front line, passing from rank to rank, braving death with as much fearlessness as the hardiest soldier, and animating, by her presence and spirit, the drooping hearts of her worn and depressed companions. Her retreat from that disastrous affair-continually exposed to the fire of the enemy, almost trampled upon by the horses and covered with mud and gore-was attended by a series of unparallelled sufferings and escapes. She was afterwards in several other engagements, conducted herself in all of them with the greatest intrepidity and every where sustaining by her enthusiasm, the confidence of the insurgents. The fatigues and excitement of a camp life appear to have been too severe for her delicate frame, and she died about one year after having entered into the service, on her way to join the troops at Warsaw, indignant at the base surrender made to Prussia, by Chlapow. ski, the general under whom she acted. Her biographer, who was an intimate personal friend, speaks of her as a woman of noble family, beautiful person, fine attainments. and exalted patriotism and piety. The history he has given of her possesses all the interest of the most exciting romance.

HESE Pills have now been more than eight years before the Public, and their just pretensions to the character claimed for them closely examined and test-d by a great number of persons, too intelligent to be deceived, and too deeply interested in the results not to observe with care, and judge without favor. Experience has not weakened these pretensions, but strengthened and confirmed them by a mass of testimony of such respectable character as has never sustained any article in this form in any coun-The original design was to relieve Dyspepsia. and those functional derangements upon which it commonly depends. They were however found, by preserving the stomach and bowels in a healthy state of action, to tend greatly to ward off those " bilious attacks" to which many are liable, but not as an An ti-Bilious Pill, in the common signification of the term. Those, therefore, who expected in them an active purgative (though to many they are such.) may have been disappointed; yet few instances of failure have been ascertained among those who have faithfully employed the article according to the design, where relief might reasonably have been expected. In addition to the habitual dyspeptic, those who from custom or from necessity, as in traveling or business, take their meals hastily, find in the use of these Pills great protection or relief, from consequent occasional attacks of indigestion; and, indeed, all whose habits or pursuits are sedentary, may take them with safety and benefit. The chief objection urged against them is, that they encourage indulgence in the pleasures of the table by the immunity they give from the painful effects of excess.
