MISCELLANEOUS.
THE TWO VIRTUOUS;
OR, THE BOLOGNA SAUSAGE.

Not very many years ago, there lived in the little town of R——, a suburb of one of our Atlantic cities, an individual known as Dr. Q——, who was noted for three remarkable manifestations of the passion of love; as Mr. Tassitro would classify them. These were, the love of money, the love of science, and the love of Bologna sausages. The first he inherited with his estate from his father; the second he caught by inoculation from a near neighbor, Professor Z., formerly of some eastern college; and the third probably grew out of the first, as it is well known that Bologna, American Bologna sausages, when eaten sufficiently sparingly, are the most economical food that can be procured. Dr. Q—— had attached to his mansion at R——, a large room, that he called his "Museum," filled with pictures, and all manner of curiosities and articles of virtu. The walls were hung with numerous paintings of every size and shape; some of them landscapes of a peculiarly dirty and smoky appearance and which in consequence had been pronounced by friendly connoisseurs to be the genius of Teniers, Claude and Ruysdael; others were portraits of ancient ladies and gentlemen, with glaring red and white cheeks, and stony blue eyes, that at the first glance chilled through the gazer like an east wind. These were all veritable "Titans," "Vandykes," and "Raphaels," supposed probably from the fact that they looked as little like the works of those immortal artists, as it was possible for a bad painter with bad materials to make them. In addition to these invaluable paintings, our Doctor's museum was filled with stuffed birds, striped snakes, ringtailed monkeys, and every kind of flying and creeping thing, as well as all manner of unknown and unknowable curiosities from the four quarters of the world, including of course that indispensable to all museums, the identical club with which the renowned Captain Cook was killed at Owyhee. All the Doctor's friends, and every little boy and girl in the village, were laid under contribution to furnish contributions to this rare collection, for which they generally received a "Thank-ee," and sometimes, if the donation happened to be unusually dirty and unclassifiable, the "thank-ees" extended to two or three. Now the Doctor had a nephew, the son of a widowed sister-in-law, a lad of some fifteen or sixteen years, who had been unusually active in securing rubbish for his uncle's collection; which by the way he must have done from sheer love of science, as he never received any remuneration for his pains, excepting the everlasting "thank-ee" and a free admittance to the museum, which he enjoyed in common with the other acquaintance of his uncle.

Ned Wilson (the nephew) having after much importunity prevailed upon his mother to let him go to sea, had accordingly procured a voyage, and one morning presented himself in the breakfast room of his uncle, to take leave of his rich relative previous to sailing. The Doctor was at first surprised when his nephew announced his purpose, and delighted when he learned that his destination was the Mediterranean, and that it was his intention if possible to visit the ruins of Herculaneum and Pompeii.

"Of course, Ned," said he, "you will not forget your old habits when there. What vast fields for the industrious and patient explorer are those buried cities! Every house a museum in itself, and every street stowed with the curiosities of a former day! You've been a good boy, Ned, at home, and you mustn't forget your uncle when at Pompeii! And, suddenly recollecting himself, your uncle mustn't forget you, neither! And then turning to his wife, he inquired whether she could think of some little present that would be acceptable to their clever relative.

Now it happened that on the morning in question, the Doctor had had his favorite dish of Bolognas on the table; but they didn't relish very well. He thought they were rather "hurt," as the term is; his wife thought so too; and the cook, who had been called, pronounced them the "werry worst kind of tastin' things she ever see." They were accordingly rejected, and now stood on the side-board.

"What can we do for you, Ned!" the Doctor repeated, as he began to pace the room; for there was a struggle going on in his own breast between his innate meanness and a desire to do a little something for a lad who had done so much for him, and from whom he now expected more. He kept walking to and fro, occasionally repeating, "Give him—give him!" but he could not make up his mind what, until he accidentally cast his eye on the discarded Bolognas, when he finished the sentence: "Give him—a—a—Bologno sausage, Betty! Nothing can be more delicious on board a ship." And drawing a long breath, his mind seemed relieved of an immense load. The sausage was accordingly wrapped in an old newspaper and given to Ned, with many almost paternal benedictions and not a few injunctions to remember his uncle; and the nephew quitted the splendid mansion of his relative with a swelling breast, and not a very exalted opinion of his liberality.

Three years passed away, and Ned Wilson returned to the village of R——, having in the mean time visited nearly every port in the Mediterranean. One morning, a few days after his return, he made his appearance at Dr. Q——'s mansion, having under his arm a small tin box. The first greeting over his uncle, who had not for a moment lost sight of the little tin box, led his nephew into his museum.

"And now, Ned, what have you got in the box, eh? Something rare, I'll warrant."

"It is something rare," said the nephew, "but what, I can't tell, I picked it up in Pompeii, but no body there knew what it was."

And he handed the box to the Doctor, who received it as eagerly as if it had been filled with mortgages.

"But stop!" said he, laying the box on the table, "we must have Professor Z—— here; and ringing the bell, he sent a messenger after his brother virtuoso.

In a few moments the Professor made his appearance, and the men of science proceeded to examine the contents of the box, which after undoing sundry wrappers, they found to consist of one article only. "Throwing his spectacles over his forehead, which he always did when about to look sharply about at anything, the Doctor commenced his examination. He turned the curiosity over and over, and looked at it on every side, and in every position of light, until his eyes ached and began to grow dim; but he could make nothing of it; and then his spectacles suddenly dropping in their place unnoticed, he handed the article to the Professor, protesting that looking at it made him nearly stone blind. The Professor examined it as closely as the Doctor.

"The form is familiar to me," said he; "it looks very much like a sausage."

"So it does—it does!" chimed in the Doctor; "Don't go, Ned, turning to his nephew, who had his hand on the latch of the door. "Don't go; we shall know what it is!"

"It looks like a sausage," repeated the Professor, solemnly; "and," putting it to his nose, "it smells like a sausage." And then, having tasted it, he threw it from him as if it had been a rattlesnake, exclaiming, "And by Jupiter, Doctor, it is a sausage—a Bologna; and a very bad one too!"

The truth flashed upon the uncle. He stood irresolute a moment, and then seizing the club that had killed Captain Cook, he turned suddenly round. His graceless nephew had just closed the street door behind him.

DIALOGUE IN THE MARKET.

Between a Yankee, an Irishman, a Dutchman and a Frenchman, on the subject of eatables and speakables.

Yankee—Hullo, Mounseer! what are you going to do with them are frogs there, in that are basket?

Frenchman—De frog? Vy, sare, I will eat the frog.

Irishman—Ate him! what, that sprawling divil of a straddle bug? I'd as soon put all the serpents that St. Patrick carried out of Ireland in a bag down the throat iv me.

Yankee—You can't be in earnest now, Mounseer. You ain't such a picklerel as to bite at a frog!

Frenchman—Picklerelle? Vat is dat you call de picklerelle?

Yankee—A darned good long nosed fish that we catch with a frog bait.

Frenchman—Vat you tell me, sare!—You bait de frog vif de fish! Mon Dieu! you no understand de frog—you no taste, no sense, no skill in the cuisine! Fish de bait vid de frog! Begar!

Yankee—Right the bait! Why don't you parleytoo-yish eend foremost!

Irishman—Ay, Cuihshlameere, why don't you put the cart before the horse, as I do 'em!

Dutchman—Yaw, myneer, why dont you dalk good English, like I does!

Yankee—Dalk! Ha, ha, ha! you talk about dalking! Why, you can't no more pronounce the English than a wild Hoppinotot. You can't get your clumsy Tutch tongue round the words of civilized language. Now listen to me, Mounseer Frenchman, and I'll teach you how it's done.

Dutchman—No—listen to me—I understand how to pronounce the most properest. I comes from to toddler sidt of Enkland and zure I knows how to spoko de pure Enklish.

Irishman—Is that a reasonable sort iv a reason now! By that same logic I should know how to speak the English still better for I came from this side iv England, and was never across the Irish channel since I was born, let alone the day before that. And thin, besides, me great grandmother was a schoolmaster, and me second cousin, on me neighbor's side, was a praicher intill the bargain. So, Mister Mounseer, I'm the boy that'll taiche ye to spake English properly.

Frenchman—Oui. All speak de Inglesse—de Yankee, de Irish-man, de Dutch-man, all speak him bees, and all speak him different! Begar! Now, vat you call dis (showing a potato) dis pome de terre!

Yankee—That pum de tar? Why, Mounseer, I call that pum de tar a potato.

Frenchman—Oui. Now, sare, vat you call him?

Irishman—A paratie—a raal mürphy, to be sare.

Frenchman—Oui. And now, sare, vat you call him!

Dutchman—Wat I galls him! Wy, I galls him a bodado, and any vool might know dat.

Frenchman—Ha, ha, ha! begar! You all call him different. You all speak de true Inglesse, and you no speak him like. Ha, ha, ha, begar!

Yankee—Well, Mounseer, now let me ax you a question. What is this I have in my hand! (showing a cane.)

Frenchman—Vat is dat? Vy, sare, dat is—dat is—Sacre—me no can tink. Vat you call de homme, de rascal, vot kill A-belle!

Yankee—What killed a belle?

Frenchman—Oui, Mounseer; dat grand rascal, dat murd, dat knock down A-belle, vile he keep de sheep, de mutton.

Dutchman—Oh, oh, I know what he means now; he means Gain, the vurst murderer.

Frenchman—Oui; yes, sare; 'tis one cane.

Yankee—Right, Mounseer, it isn't two canes. Now what do you call it, you liumb of old Ireland, you essence of brogue.

Irishman—I'm after calling it a shillalah; and if you don't be aisy calling ill names, I'll be after provin't to you.

Dutchman—Now, shentlemans, dont vight about a vort. Hark do me! I'll but you out one. Vat you galls dis (showing a quantity of curd with whey.)

Irishman—Och! and isn't it a bonney-clabber!

Yankee—You may call it what you please, but I call it lupperd milk.

Frenchman—Lop-ear milk! Mon Dieu! De Yankee ave de ear; you hear vat he say. Mon Dieu?

Dutchman—Now you pe's all wrong. Dis, wat I have in the nokkin, is schmeercasse.

Yankee—It's a darned queer case, I think. Why you don't know the difference betwixt tweedledum and tweedledee. So, good bye to you.

Frenchman—De feedledum he is no feedledee. Begar! (Here one of the frogs hopped out of Monsieur's basket; he pursues him) Keshey de frog! keshey de frog! O, me pauvre frog! O, grand fricasse!—He scape—he run away—begar!

Irishman—Och, and isn't that quare now, that a livin straddle-bug should run away before he is cooked at all, at all; the ungrateful sarprint! St. Patrick presarve me from all frogs and toads and other snakes as long as I live. And so with this praffis, I'm off.

Dutchman—Mine Cot! wat a vuss is here about a pull-vrog! But I'll puy my zourgout, and then I'll pe off doo, as lesser as no time.

CLASSICAL SCHOOL.—A for some experience in the business of teaching, the Subscribers take the method of again bringing his school to the notice of the public. Situated in the County of Franklin, about midway between Lenoir and Shocco, in a highly moral and healthy community, also removed from scenes of dissipation, extravagance and dissipation, it is believed to possess advantages in point of location, not inferior to those of any Institution in the State. And if the Subscriber has thus far been successful in giving satisfaction as a Teacher, his qualifications for usefulness will at least not be diminished by the increased proficiency consequent upon a longer discharge of his duties. The Exercises of the School will be resumed on Tuesday, the 6th of July. Tuition $18 per Session of 6 months, payable in advance. No deduction made for loss of time by the student, or his being dismissed for good and sufficient cause, until the full price required for all such sessions at any time during the Session. Board can be had at $5 per month in the families of the Rev. Amos Jones, Mr. John Gray, and Messrs. WASHINGTON and WILLIAM BAASER, all within a convenient distance of the School House.
