MERCHAEL BERNE

NOCTURNAL ADVENTURE was during the reign of Lonis XIVwhen the famous Cartoucke levied his nightwhen the famous Carsonelle of Paris, by contributions on the good people of Paris, and therefore to be roasted, boned, siewed or jugged.

All these methods of cooking have their shoes with the terror of his redoubtable name in atter defiance of all law, civil and military that the following circumstance occurred:

Two o'clock had just sounded from the deep toned bell of Notre Dame, as Mudame de Bauffremont, a young and noble lady of Paris, entered her apartments on her return from an evening party, and after being assisted to undress by her women, and comforta-bly farrayed in a loose dressing gown, dismissed them for the night, and seated herself | mend beginning soon. in a musing attitude at the corner of the fire hat she might meditate at her ease.

She was engaged upon a journal which, the great misfortune of the literary and cientific world, was not afterwards found sen a person of wonderful intelligence, and to accurate an observer, that nothing however studiously concealed, escaped her atten-tion or deceived her judgment. After about in hour of profound silence and uninterrupted occupation, she was preparing to lay aside her writing materials previous to retiring then a smothered noise in the chimney attracted her attention; and presently, preceded by scloud of soot, and a number of swallow's nests and a quantity of mortar, a man armed to the teeth rolled into the middle of the chamber. As in his precipitous descent, he had scattered the firebrands about the room, his first action on gathering himself up was to replace them one by one methodically with the tongs. He then carefully pushed back with his foot several pieces of burning cos without crushing them on the carpet, and finally turning towards Madame de la Marquis, who stood regarding his movements with astonishment not unmingled with fear, he offered her a profound reverence and said: Madame, dare I ask whom I have the honor of addressing?' Sir,' replied she in wonderful coolness, 'I am Madame de Bauffremont ; but as I do not know you at all, as you have not the appearance of a robber, and as you have been so very careful of my furniture. I am at a loss to know why you appear in my chamber in the middle of the night and by the chimney.

Believe me, Madam, replied the noctur-nal visiter, I had not the slightest intention of entering thus unceremoniously into your apartment. But time presses-will you have the goodness just to accompany me to the door of your hotel? I pledge my word no harm shall come near you if you comply,' added he, significantly drawing a pistol from his belt, and taking one of the candles. " But sir-"

Madame, you will be so kind as to hurry yourself ?' continued he, examining the lock of his pistol. We will descend together, and you will order the porter to unbar the

And ndeed the gallant ruffian was true to his word. for on the day intimated she received a letter of excuses and thanks, perfectly respectful and remarkably well written, signed 'Car-touche,' enclosing a safe conduct for Madame de Bauffremont and her family, should they chance to encounter any of his band. Accompanying the letter was a small box which contained a beautiful diamond, without setting, valued at two thousand crowns, and which the Marquis placed in the hands of the Treasurer of Notre Dame for the benefit of invalids of the Hotel Dien.

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA—MEDI-CAL DEPARTMENT.—The Plan of instruction in this department of the University, presents peculiarities to be found in no other. School of Medicine in the Union. The Lectures commence on the first of October, and terminate on the 4th of July en-

Owing to the length of the Session, which embraces period of nine months, three Professors are enabled o perform all the duties which in other medical in stitutions are usually assigned to six; and the students are seldom required to attend more than two lectures on the same day. By this arrangement, the students have an opportunity of being well grounded in Anatomy, Physiology, and other elementary branches of Medical Science, before they investigate their applications in connection with the study of the practice of Medicine and Surgery.

Immediately before each lecture, the students are subjected to a full and rigid examination on the precaling lecture, or on portions of approved text books It's apparent, that the plan, of which the outlines have been briefly stated, is one which allows the student to commence as well as to complete his medical studies in the institution; and presents a happy combination of the advantages of the system of instruction by private pupilege and that of public lectures.

Any person of approved moral conduct may offer as a candidate, and receive the degree of M. D., without reference to the time he has been engaged in the study of medicine, or of joining the school, provided he un-dergoes in a satisfactory manner the various examinations prescribed by the enactments.
