Lieutenant Carlysle was one of the noblest, best, and most generous youths that ever sought the shores of India. He was exactly sixteen when he sailed from England, leaving behind him many true and sterling friends, that his many virtues and amiable disposition had won for him. He was of a most sanguine temperament, and one of the handsomest lads I ever beheld. From infancy we had been brought up together.

ceval Carlysle. Yes-the emaciated, careworn and haggard being, who now shook me so cordially by the hand, was no less than the dear companion of my boyhood. Occasionally, indeed, I could trace the speaking eye, the fine countenance of my early friend. But alas! all the signs of health and youth had fled. Ten short years had robbed Carlysle of all his bloom and much of his wonted high spirits. The fire of his eye, and the joyous tone of his happier days were gone ! His good heart, his generous soul alone remained, alone were saved of the general wreck of his once buoyant mind and athletic body. At first I thought ill-health, the warmth of eastern climes, or probably dissipation had causoon undeceived me. He saw my distress. once handsome features; and reading my and opening her huge jaws, bounded on me. thoughts he at once exclaimed.

'I see you are startled by my altered looks. I expected no less; but I thought as I had sent you an account of my accident, you would have been better prepared to anticipate the change in my present appearance.' 'Accident ! I never heard of any; nor have I received the ter from you these three years.' 'Then my epistles have gone astraythat's all. But as they have done so, I will tell you how the affair took place ;- that is to say, if you should wish to hear it.

I expressed my desire to do so, and he repeated to me the following circumstances, which I give nearly in his own language as possible :

'I was quartered high up in the countrycommanding a detachment of at least fifty miles from any other European. My only recreation was lion hunting, which I occasionally indulged in, and succeeded in deswhich were here so numerous and so bold as to approach our tents and carry off our provisions.

I was thus amusing myself one morning, well mounted on a fleet Arab, followed by a dozen men on foot, armed with unerring rifles, when one of my people suddenly discovered the prints of a lion's paw in the sandy plain over which we were passing, apparently inclining towards a deep jungle some two hundred yards in advance of us. I instantly dismounted to examine the foot marks and was carefully tracing them, when a sudden cry of terror made me look up. I beheld immediately in front of me a magnificent lioness, which had suddenly bounded out of the covert. Not a moment was to be lost .--I sprang towards my horse-my syce, however, alarmed at the appearance of the lioness, had quitted the rein, and before I could reach him, the frightened animal was half way across the open space. My servants had all fled. I was alone. The lioness was lashing her sides with her tail, and evidently up, and making her teeth meet in my left arm, began to drag me away. Great heavens ! I feel even at this moment the same agony I then endured. In recalling the torexperience the pain she caused me, as she dragged me along evidently bearing me toas I was, I knew all this ; I read my doom and shuddered at it. Twice did the flesh break away from my arm, and twice did she renew her savage hold on me, and that so powerfully, that she succeeded in getting me inside of the jungle. Here she paused un. able to proceed further. Two or three shots were fired at her without success. At length cils, Buttons, Pictures. sed the havoc I beheld. Perceval, however, finding her situation perilous, and her prey likely to escape, she retired a few paces, and He marked my horror, as I tried to recall his determining on one effort, raised herself,

> I felt her teeth but they closed not. I felt the whole weight of her body, but she stirred not. In the next moment, I heard a human voice. I was released of the pondrous load and lifted up. The lioness lay dead at my feet. She had expired in the very act of destroying me. I fainted. I was taken in a palanquin, in a state of insensibility, nearly three hundred miles, and was treated for two years as an invalid. At last, I was recommended to try the air of my native country.

returned to Europe, and here I am. Poor fellow ! he is now no more. Escaped from the perils of the East, he has found a grave in his native land. Requiescat in pace.

The pro prietor has never known an instance where they did not give perfect satisfaction. Several thousand boxes have been sold with the last year, restoring to health persons in almost every stage of consumption. and those laboring under the most distressing colds and coughs. They do not check and dry up the cough, but render it easy, promote expectoration, al-lay the tickling or irritation, and remove the proximate or exciting cause. They are made from a combinstion of the most valuable expectorant, or cough medicines, and are undoubtedly superior to everything in use for those complaints. Hundreds upon hundreds of certificates have been offered of their wonderful virtues, from those who have been saved from an untimely grave, and restored to perfect health, by using them.
