LOVE IN A STAGE COACH. BY A BACHELOR.

How it poured! Rattle, rattle against the casement; splash, splash, on the ground underneath, all night, and now when I awoke, here it was raining away harder than ever, as if a second deluge was at hand. Confound that breakfast bell ! I do wish there was no such thing as a breakfast on a rainy morning, for then one might lie abed all day, or until the storm cleared off. Philosophers tell us that rain is necessary for the economy of nature; it may be true, though I never trouble myself about such things; but it so, men ought to be made like dormice, to sleep on in a semial state, until the rain sees fit to in a shower, or we would have been born with patent oil-cloth or India rubber skins.

had a passion for walking in the countrymore fool for it !- I had trudged away off, here, eight miles and more from town, to see a country wedding, 'after the order used was very handsomely done, and that I was much editied-so much so, that one of these days I shall tell how the parties deported themselves, how many new hats there were in the wedding companies, who drove the so interesting to young misses and old bawith a bright blue sky, until toward dosk, that the morning would see a clear sky over was, pouring down, in one dark, splashy, continuous stream, for all the world like an wagging! Down I hurried to the breakfast table. had just buttered my bread, and was swallowing the first mouthful of coffee, when the norn of the coach to town was heard, and looking out the window, I saw the vehicle, its four smoking horses, dashing down the turnpike. It was my only chance to reach the city that day. I bolted my bread, gulped down the coffee till my throat was scalded, jammed my hat on my head, and made a dive through the door. The driver did not see me, but cracked his whip with a flourish and went on. I shouted, still the old villian would not notice me, but with another flourish of his whip, set his four-in-hand in a brisker trot, and rattled down the hill. Desperate with the fear of being left, I pitched after him, squattering the mud around at every step, and shouting at the top of my lungs; but I might have ran on and shouted till doomsday had not a passenger seen me and stopped the deaf old sinner. Out of breath. wet to the skin, covered with mud from head to foot, and not in the best humor from the loss of my breakfast, I mounted into the coach, but the instant I placed my foot inside the vehicle all my sulkiness vanished, for one of the loveliest angels that ever blessed an old rickety coach, or warmed the soul of a sour, breakfastless bachelor with her presence, sat upon the back saet.

Did you ever fall in love? Of course .-And the lady was the loveliest of her sex? To be sure. Then this stage-coach beauty was if, after this, you don't think my fellow pasme crazy to think of them. What cared I for rain. Splash, splash, splash, ave! rain away there, like blazes-who cares? One doesn't get a tele-a-tele with a pretty girl every day of the week-so I determined to make the best of

At length we got on the subject of house-keeping. Now, if there is Advertisements, inserted in the SEMI-WEEKLY any thing I hate, it is a woman that can't keep house, and I trembled at every word, lest my angel should confess her ignorance of these matters. Shade of Apiscius! how my heart leaped when she told me that hardly a day passed in which she did'nt make bread, or pies, or sponge cake, or some other of those shimshaws that delight the heart of man; and in expatiating on such delicacies, she rose to a pitch of eloquence that I never heard surpassed. I could'at resist my feelings, but snatched her hand to my lips and kissed it.

Yes! I felt that she was destined to be mine; for if there is any thing a wife ought to know it is this. I come of a race of eaters. My grandfather has lunched on half a dozen rabits, and died at last of a surfeit produced by eating two young pigs. My father can break his fast on a brace of capons, or deyour a pair of turkeys without having to pick his teeth; and a brother of mine can tuck in an hundred, of pickled oysters and dishes of so aiding, cheering and influencing a large chicken salad, which does creditto the family. | circle of brothers and sisters, that the lisping | in a high degree in his glasses. I was ready to surrender at discretion, and I already fancied myself lightening the dear creature beside me of the old maid's objurgations when her tongue gets troublesome duty of collecting the rents of her various fine houses. I was charmed to think of the progress I had made in her af fections. What a delicately rosy cheek it was that I just then slyly kissed, she blushing the deeper at my warmth! And then her saucy, pouting lips; and her figure, just the very size for a man who hated your thin weasel-shaped young misses as he hated epidemics. Ah, what a wife she would make How I thanked my stars that I had hitherto set my face like a flint against every temptal tion to marry-for now my firmness was to be rewarded by this beauty and heiress dropping into my mouth. And then I preached to myself a mental homily on the short sightedness of man, as I ventured to steal another kiss from the conscious and blushing little angel at my side. I was just about to pop the question itself, when the coach stopped and the driver descended and opened the

AN ELDER SISTER.

BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

The station of the elder sister has always appeared to me so peculiarly important, that the privileges which it involves assumes almost a sacred character. The natural adjunct and ally of the mother, she comes forth among the younger children, both as a monitress and example. She readily wins their confidence, from a conviction that she even more freshly than the parent, is touched with the feeling of their infirmities.' In proportion to her interest in their affections, will be her power to improve their characters, and to allure them, by the bright example of her own finished excellence, Her influence upon brothers is often eminently high moral principle, with rich and refined by an admiring stranger, 'I will venture to affirm that he had a good sister and that she was older than himself.

It has been my lot to know more than one elder sister of surpassing excellence. I have seen them assuming the office of a teacher, and faithfully imparting to those whose understandings were but feebly enlightened, the advantages of their own more complete education. I have seen them softening and modifying the character of brothers-breathing, until it melted, upon obduracy which no authority could subdue.

I have seen one in the early bloom of youth, and amid the temptations of affluence, sons-and the wild one from its sports,

I knew another, on whose bosom a sick brother rested, whose nursing kindness failed not, night or day; from whom the most bitwhen death came, saw the last glance of the sufferer's gratitude divided between her and the mother who bore him.

I have seen another, when the last remaining parent was taken to God, come forth in her place, the guide and comfort of the orphans. She believed, that to her who was now in heaven, the most acceptable mourning would be to follow her injunctions, and to fulfil her unfinished designs. Her motto was the poet's maxim: 'He mourns the dead, who lives as they desire.' As if the glance of that pure ascended spirit was constantly upon her, she entered into her unfinished labors. To the poor she was the messenger of mercy: she bore the same crosses with a meek and patient mind. But especially to her younger sisters and brothers, she poured out, as it were the very essence of her being. She cheered their sorrows. She shared and exalted their pleasures. She studied their traits of character, that she might adapt the best method both to their infirmities and virties. To the germ of every good disposition she was a faithful florist; to their way wardness she opposed a mild firmness till she

She laid the infant sister on her own pillow, she bore it in her arms, and rejoiced in its growth, and health, and beauty. And when it hasted on its tottering feet to her, as to a mother, for it had known no other, the smile on that young brow, and the tear that chastened it, were more radiant than any semblance of joy, which glitters in the halls

The little ones grew up and around her, and blessed her, and God gave her reward of her labours, in their affection and goodness. Thus she walked, day by day, with her eye to her heart, upheld by the happiness which Mr. Powell, said I, for that was the name she diffused-and as I looked upon her. I

The Oak .- We pause at the foot of the great oak, and survey its majestic height and its wide reaching branches. We count on its trunk the many years that it has been rearing its head against the mighty storms that have in vain spent their force upon its gnarled boughs. We dig about its roots to find out the secret of its deep hold upon the earth, and we discover that time, instead of weakening its grasp, gives it a firmer grip. This noble tree is a fit emblem of our matchless Republic. It protects all that comes Powell burst into a laugh, and laughed on within its range, and stands upright in every beneath its branches. Tis the tree of Liberty that points its head to heaven, in adoration of dom the world over.

> One great secret of domestic enjoyment is no much overlooked. It lies in bringing our wants down to our circumstances instead of toiling to bring our circumstances up to our wants. Wants will always be ahead of means and there will be no end to the race, if you set the latter to chasing the former. Put the voke of self-denial on desire, apply the spur of industry to energy, and if the latter does
