AN ABLE-BODIED SEAMAN.

publican, about a stout a thletic, lump of a chap, who during the last war, calisted on board one of our men of war, as an ablehodied seaman. The fellow was duly entered on the ship's book and was soon at sea. The first rough weather that came, he was ordered aloft, with the usual accompaniment of " hurry," but he didn't happen to be in a particular hurry at that particular time. He looked aft, shrogged his shoulders, and saying " Mister, I shan't go up, thar !" " Not go up, you rascal?" "No, sir; I'm d-d if with them conflutements that's knockin' and-swingin' about, at least until every thing is quiet," " Why you lubberly scoundred. didn't you ship for an able bodied seaman?" "I did, and 1 am an able-bodied seaman !" saying you are an able-bodied seaman," said the officer in a rage. "Why, I mean," says Bob," I can whip any man on board !"

THE OLDEN TIMES. The modern fashion, adopted by our belles, of wearing bustles, is not so new as many persons imagine. In the reign of James I, the fashion of ladics wearing verdingales, in ADVERTISEMENTS .- For every Sisteen Lines, order to make themselves appear to have enits height; and about the same period the men adopted the plan of stuffing their trank hose for the same purpose. - A writer of that day describes these stuffed trunk hose as a sort of Advertisements, inserted in the SEMI-WEEKLY 'verdingale breeches.' This ridiculous cusward predicaments. On one occasion it is related that a young man, so dressed and distended with bran, while in conversation with some ladies unfortunately tore his hose with A good story is told by the Baltimore Re- nisable. At one time a law was passed, prohibiting the men from wearing their breeches stuffed with bran; and a man having been taken before a justice on suspicion of infringing this law, established his innocence by drawing forth the stuffing, which consisted of a pair of shecis, two table cloths, ten napkins, four shirts, a brush, a comb, night-caps, and some other minor articles. The ladies, who were the first to set the fashion in this way, were not a whit behind the gentlemen coolly answered the order of the officer by in the size to which they distended themselves; but whether the gentlemen of the present day will have the gallantry to follow the fashion of I'm going up that to have my head broke the ladies, and adopt bustle breeches, yet remains to be seen .- English paper.

THE MOTHER OF NAPOLEON.

The family of Napoleon, says Alison, though noble, had not been distinguished, and had suffered severely from misfortune. The mother of the great captain, who was marked by great beauty, and no common firmness and intrepidity of mind, shared in the fatigues and dangers of her husband, at a period of great trial, and was engaged with him in some ex. the reduced price of $10 the single Leap, $12 the peditions on horseback. His father died at Season, and $15 to ensure a Mare to be with feal, the age of 38-but the want of parental care (payable as soon as the fact is ascertained.) or the was more than supplied by the mother to property changed. Mares sent from a distance will whose early education and solicitude Napoleon, in after life, mainly ascribed bis eleva- though the utmost caution will be used to guard opinion that the future good or bad conduct of the child, depends entirely on the mother. Though left a widow in the prime of life, the mother of Napoleon had already borne thirteen children, of whom five sons and three daughters survived their father. She lived to see one of them wearing the crown of Charlemagne, and another scated on the throne of Charles V.

NO EXCUSE FOR AN OFFENSIVE BLEATH .---I can see no reason why a man's complexion merely should exclude him from the dining table, but I do see a very good reason why he should be banished for not taking good care of his teeth. A bad breath is such a detestable thing, that it might be a sufficient reason for not marrying a person with otherwise agreeable qualities. It is moreover, perfectly inexcusable thus to transform oneself into a walking sepulchre. Nobody needs to have an offensive breath. A careful removal of substances between the teeth, rinsing the mouth after meals and a bit of charcoal held in the mouth, will always cure a bad breath. Charcoal used as a dentifrice (that is, rubbed on in powder with a brush) is apt to injure the enamel, but a lump of it held in the mouth two or three times a week and slowly chewed, has a wonderful power to preserve the teeth and purify the breath. The action is purely chemical. It counteracts the acid arising from a disordered stomach, or food decaying about the gums, and it is this acid which destroys the teeth. A friend of ours had, when about twenty years of age, a fronttooth that turned black gradually, crumbled and broke off piecemeal. By frequent- Her: 156 ly chewing charcoal, the progress of decay was not only arrested, but nature set vigorously to work to restore the breach and the crumbled portion grew again, till the whole tooth was as sound as before. Every one knows that charcoal is an antiputrescent. It the breath .- MRS. CHILD.
