SARAH CURRAN.
She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps And lovers around her are sighing, But coldly she turns from their gaze and weeps, For her heart in his grave is lying.

She sings the wild song of her native plains, Every note which she loved awaking—Ah! little did they think who delight in her strains, How the heart of the minstrel is breaking.

He had liv'd for his love, for his country he died, They were all that to life had entwined him—Nor soon shall the tears of his country be dried, Nor long will his love stay behind him.

Oh, make her a grave where the sunbeams rest, When they promise a glorious morrow, They'll shine o'er her sleep, like a smile from the west From her own loved island of sorrow.

MOORE.
The evening before Robert Emmet's death, Miss Curran was admitted into his dungeon To bid him an eternal farewell. He was leaving in a melancholy mood against the window of his prison, and the heavy clanking of his chains smote dully on her heart.
The interview was bitterly affecting, and melted even the callous soul of the jailor. As for Emmet himself, he wept and spoke little; but as he pressed his beloved in silence to his heart, his countenance betrayed his emotions. In a low voice, half choked by anguish, he besought her not to forget him; he reminded her of their former happiness, of the long past days of their childhood, and concluded by requesting her sometimes to visit the scenes where their infancy was spent, and, though the world might repeat his name with scorn, to cling to his memory with affection. In parting she turned round, as if to gaze once more on her widowed love. He caught her eye as she retired; it was but for a moment; and as the door closed on him, it informed her too surely that they had met for the last time on earth, but they should meet in a better world where none could separate them.
She loved him with the disinterested fervor of a woman's first and only love. When every worldly maxim arrayed itself against him; when blasted in fortune, disgraced and danger darkened around his name, she loved him the more ardently for his sufferings. If then, his fate could awaken the sympathy even of his foes, what must have been the agency of her whose whole soul was occupied by the portals of the tomb suddenly closed between them and the being they most loved on earth—who had sat at its threshold, as one shut out in a cold and lonely world from whence all that was most lovely and loving had departed.

To render her widowed situation more desolate, she had incurred her father's displeasure by her unfortunate attachment, and was an exile from her paternal roof. But could the sympathy and offices of friends have reached a spirit so shocked and driven in by horror, she would have experienced no want of consolation, for the Irish are proverbially a people of quick and generous sen-sibilities. The most delicate and cherishing attentions were paid her by families of wealth and distinction. She was led in to society, and they tried by all kinds of occupation and amusement to dissipate her grief and wear her from the tragical story of her lover. But it was all in vain. There are some strokes of calamity that scorch the soul —that penetrate to the vital seat of happiness —and blast it, never again to put forth bud or blossom. She never objected to frequent the haunts of pleasure, but she was as much alone there as in the depths of solitude. She walked about in a sad reverie, apparently unconscious of the world around her. She carried within her an inward woe that mocked all blandishment of friendship, and heeded not the song of the charmer charm he ever so wisely.

On the occasion of a masquerade at the Rotunda, her friends brought her to it.
There can be no exhibition of far gone wretchedness more striking and painful than to meet it in such a scene. To find it wearing like a spectre lonely and joyless where all around is gay—to see it dressed out in the trappings of mirth, and looking so wan and wo begone, as if it had tried in vain to cheat the poor heart into a momentary forgetfulness of sorrow. After strolling through splendid rooms and giddy crowd with an air of utter abstraction, she sat her self down on the steps of an orchestra and looking about for some time with a vacant air that showed insensibility to the gaudy scene, she began, with the capriciousness of a sickly heart to warble a little plaintive air. She had an exquisite voice; but on this occasion it was so simple, so touching, it breathed forth such a soul of wretchedness, that she drew a crowd, mute and silent around her, and melted every one into tears.

The story of one so true and tender could not but excite great interest in a country remarkable for enthusiasm. It completely won the heart of a brave officer, who paid his address to her, and thought that one so true to the dead could not but prove affectionate to the living. She declined his attentions, for her thoughts were irretrievably engrossed by the memory of her former lover. He, however, persisted in his suit. He solicited not her tenderness, but her esteem. He was assisted by her conviction of his worth, and her sense of her own destitute and dependent situation, for she was existing on the kindness of her friends. In a word, he at length succeeded in gaining her hand, though with the solemn assurance that her heart was unutterably another's.

He took her with him to Sicily, hoping that a change of scene might wear out the remembrance of early woe. She was an amiable and an exemplary wife, and made an effort to be a happy one, but nothing could cure the silent and devouring melancholy that had entered upon her very soul.
She wasted away in a slow but hopeless decline, and at length sunk into the grave, the victim of a broken heart.

Doctor Brandreth's Pills.
THESE PILLS are so well known for a mild yet effectual purgative that it is almost useless to say anything about their excellent qualities. As a general family and antibilious medicine they are without a rival. The looseness of spirits, acute headache, &c. &c., to which all are more or less subject in this climate, are removed immediately by a dose of the Brandreth PILLS. They are alike safe for children, as to every other period of life, and require no extra attention in diet or clothing. Their virtues may be summed up as a medicine which strengthens the feeble, and consolidates the muscles of the strong; and will be found of infinite value to females of all classes who wish to be secure from sickness.
OBSERVE.—No Brandreth Pills are genuine, unless each box has upon it three labels, and on each label two signatures of Dr. Benjamin Brandreth.
So that each box to be genuine must have six signatures of Dr. Brandreth upon it.
Printed directions may be had with them.

WM. W. GRAY'S Invaluable Ointment, FOR THE CURE OF EXTERNAL DISEASES GENERALLY.
The Presidential contest in England, has will be more severe than any heretofore known.
Not one friend of the great Henry Grey, Will, from the Poll; he found a way While the numerous friends of Van Buren, Will prove themselves prompt, zealous men,
And it is said, that the supporters of Gilkouth, Will be at the election before the afternoon.
We wished to say something of Captain Tyler, but But he has no hope, presented how to view.
Add the Hero of the "Crossings," and Genl. Booth, With Buchanan and Co., we must have in the lot;
The parties they, being on victory both,
Should supply themselves with Gray's Ointment,
To give a new leg to each man of their name.
For, whether a "Loco Foco," or a "Whig Coon," The Ointment will cure him, and that very soon.
It will cure him, should he ever drink "licker."
But, a temperance man, it will cure him quick; Yes, prepare, I say, Loops, for a very warm battle;
And stand not back, Whigs, like no-headed cattle; But, "fodder or no fodder, stand up to the stick."
And should you die for your cause, you'll have friends at your bed.
Onward, then Spartans, in your political combats, And may your fate not be that of the Kilkenny cat!

Now, in conclusion, I deem it proper to say, If the Ointment don't cure, I'll receive no pay.
Then forward your orders, without any delay,
To your humble servant,
WILLIAM W. GRAY.
