ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.
There is a side in the affairs of men, (and women too!) which, ta'en at the flood, leads on to fortune.
HAMLET.
There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them as we will.—
A few evenings since, attended by a fine looking, dark-haired boy apparently 14 or 15 years of age, a richly dressed lady, in the 'mellow flush of life' might have been seen entering the National Theatre, and taking one of the front seats in the box. A seraph might have envied the serene composure of her countenance, and the melting softness of her deep blue eyes—and yet, at times, one could persuade himself an expression of anxiety manifested her ruby cheeks. Ladia and gentleman, as usual, came in, and the theatre soon wore its wonted aspect—a cloud of witnesses. There she sat, the mistress of an entire seat in front, as though her extreme beauty, and that commanding look which ever accompanies dignity of mind, forbade a nearer approach to her person.— Presently a lady and gentleman, dressed in dashing gait, entered the circle. They were shown the room and seat she occupied, and were soon comfortably fixed. A sudden emotion—thrill—seemed to seize the "fair lady," which was manifested by the trembling of the artificial flowers on her bonnet. Her eyes were instantly turned from them, and flashed with a brilliancy we have rarely seen, while her brow contracted, and face colored so deeply as to raise a momentary doubt of her being the same person. In a few moments she was again composed, but seemed as if on the point of some movement fraught with interest to her. The drop leaf rose; she looked not toward the stage.— The house thundered with the reception of a favorite actor; she seemed to hear it not.— In a moment she turned her head, and gazed long and steadily on the young man who had entered with the lady at her side. He was convulsed with laughter—absorbed in the scenes passing before him. Turning to address his companion he caught the fierce glance of her eye. It was enough. He trembled; grasped his hat; rose to his feet, and was about to quit the place, when his companion observed him. Again he seated himself—we watched him closely,—he was agitated beyond description. Whispering a moment together, they rose and left the theatre, leaving the strange lady and her boy again in possession of the entire seat.
Yesterday we learned the cause of this mysterious affair—our source of information is immaterial to the reader—from a person of undoubted veracity. About three years since the gentleman was a resident of Mobile, Alabama, and in moderate circumstances of life. He was what may be called a gay, social southerner. By attention and perseverance he succeeded in winning the affections of this young lady, the daughter of a wealthy merchant of the same city. As soon as his pretensions were known, the father prohibited his visits, and threatened the daughter with a disinheritation and an abandonment, if she would longer permit his attentions. In this state of things he prevailed upon her to consent to a clandestine marriage, which was accordingly solemnized. They lived together near two years, when the man became involved—lost all he was worth at the gaming table—and from want of employment, was reduced to a state of degradation in society. Sickening at the melancholy prospect before him he quitted the city without letting his affectionate and confiding wife know of his intentions. For six months he has resided in Cincinnati; passed for a single gentleman, and has been paying addresses to one if not more of the first young ladies of our city.

The Exercises of this Institution will be resumed on Monday, 8th of January 1844. The scholastic year will be divided into two sessions of 6 months each. The location of the Academy is quiet and retired, sufficiently remote from the business part of the village. Particular attention will be paid both to the moral department and the intellectual advancement of the Pupils. Respect, including washing, lights, &c. can be had in respectable private families in the village at $7 per month; and in the country, at $5. The Subscriber, wishing to remove to a more Northern climate, offers for sale the Tract or Lots, on which he resides, situated about 8 miles from Tallahassee, in Leon County. There are 1600 acres contained in the Tract, a very large proportion of which is of very superior quality. The place is plentifully watered, with excellent water; and there are not more than 30 acres of waste land in the body. About 750 acres of land are cleared, from which, with a force of forty-five or fifty hands, in a favorable season, 300 or 350 Bales of Cotton can be produced in a season, and more Corn than would serve the Plantation. The land is so situated, that it can be divided into two separate Tracts if preferred. There is good land enough to employ from seventy-five to eighty hands to advantage. The natural growth is Sweet Gum, Post Oak, Red Oak, Cherry, Ash and Dogwood. The upper terminus of the Rail Road, leading from Tallahassee to Stauw's, is only 8 miles distant, and the Railroad is twenty-three miles long.
The improvements, including buildings of every description, are extensive and convenient. A large white family can be comfortably accommodated; and there are Cabins enough for the convenient accommodation of about 80 Slaves. There is a newly erected Gin House on the place, with all necessary appendages.
The society of the neighborhood is of the most desirable kind, and the lands adjoining the Plantations of the Messrs. Cotton and N. Thompson from North Carolina. There are also several Churches, convenient enough to attend.

A GENUINE YANKEE.
Some years since an acquaintance of ours set out on horseback, from the eastern part of Massachusetts for the Green Mountains Vermont. While travelling through the town of New Salem his road led into a piece of woods, of some miles in length, and long before he got out of which he began to entertain doubts whether he should ever be blessed with the sight of a habitation; but as all things must have an end, so at last had the woods, and the nut-brown house of a farmer greeted his vision. Near the road was a tall, rawboned, overgrown, lantern-jawed boy, probably 17 years of age, digging potatoes. He was a curious figure to behold. What was lacking in the length of his bow breeches was amply made up for in width; his suspenders appeared to be composed of birch bark, grape vine and sheep skin; and as for his hat, which was of dingy white felt, poor thing! it had evidently seen better days—but now, alas! it was only the shadow of its glory. Whether the tempest of time had beaten the top in, or the lad's expanding genius had burst it out, was difficult to tell; at any rate, it was missing—through the aperture red hairs in abundance stood six ways for Sunday. In short he was one of the roughest specimens of domestic manufacture that ever mortal beheld. Our travelling friend, feeling an itching to scrape acquaintance with the critter, drew up the reins of his horse, and began:
"Hallo, my good friend, can you inform me how far it is to the next town?"
Jonathan started up—leaned on his hoe handle—reared one foot on the gambrel of his sinister leg, and replied:
"Hullo yourself! how'd dew!—wall I guess I can. Taint near as fur as used to be afore they cut the woods away—then it was generally reckoned four mile, but now the sun shrivels up the road, and don't make more'n tew. The fust house you come to though is a barn, and the next is a haystack; but old Hoskin's house is on beyant, You'll be sure to meet his gals long afore you git there; tairnal Yimpin' critters, they plague our folks more'n a little. His sheep git into our paster every day, and his gals git into our orchard. Dad sets the dog after the sheep and me arter the gals—and the way he makes the wool, and I the petticoats, fly, is a sin to snakes."
"I see you are inclined to be facetious, young man—pray tell me how it happens that one of your legs is shorter than the other?"
"I never 'tows any body to meddle with my grass tanglers, mistur, but seein' it with my I'll tell you. I was born so at my tickler request, so that when I hold my plough, I can go with one foot in the furrer, and t'other on land, and not loper over, besides, it's convenient when I mow round a side hill."
"Very good, indeed—how do your potatoes come on this year?"
"They don't come at all; I digs 'em out and there's an everlastin' snarl of 'em in each hill."
"But they are small, I perceive."
"Yess, I knows it. You see we planted some whoppin' blue-noses over in that ere patch there, and they flourished so all-fired, that these ere stopt growin' just out of spite, 'cause they knowed they couldn't begin to keep up."
"You appear to be pretty smart, and I should think you could afford a better hat than the one you wear."
"The looks aint nothin'; it's all in the behavior. This ere hat was my religious Sunday-go-to-meeting hat, and it's chock full of pety no. I've got a better one to hum; but I don't dig 'aters in it, no how."
"You have been in these parts some time, I should guess?"
"I guess so, tew. I was born'd and got my bro'n up in that ere house; but my native place is down in Parolunk."
"Then you any it is about three and a half miles to the next house?"
"Yes, sir; 'twas a spell ago, and I don't believe it's grow'd much shorter since."
"Much obliged—good bye."
"Good-bye to yo. That's a darn slick mate o' yours."
There, reader;—there is a Jonathan of the first water for you. You don't find his equal everywhere.—Independent.

COURTSHIP.—Den. Marvin, of Connecticut, a large landholder, and an exemplary man, was exceedingly eccentric in some of his notions. His courtship is said to have been as follows: Having, one day, mounted his horse, with only a sheepskin for the saddle, he rode in front of the house where Betty Lee lived, and, without dismounting, requested Betty to come to him; on her coming, he told her that the Lord had sent him there to marry her. Betty, replied, "the Lord's will be done."
