(From the Baltimore American.) Messes. Eptross-You will oblige me by in serting the following song in the American. I wish it to appear in the American, that it may meet the eve of some good Whig of Baltimore, who has " music enough in his soul" to furnish it with a TUNE. Come up with the banner

Of good HARRY CLAY, Who in peace and in war Was his country's firm stay : Spread it wide to the breeze, We're freemen who rear it. And what e'er its fate be, We'll willingly share it; We are some of the lads who in '40 were true, To the gallant Old Hero of Tippecanoe. For cute Van and Calhoun,

We care little or naught; They spread their own snares, And in these they are caught; They're for tariff-no tariff, This, that thing, and t'other, And so much and nothing, That they honest men bother. We are some of the lads who in '40 were true, To the gallant Old Hero of Tippecance.

Then up with the banner Of bold HARRY CLAY, He has told us his course In his frank, manly way; And we know that old Cate Was never to Rome, More devoted than he, To the land of his home. We are some of the lads who in '40 were true To the gallant Old Hero of Tippecanoe.

To our Whig friends abroad, Hearty greeting we send, Wishing wisdom and peace May their councils attend. And prosperity's star Shed its light on their way, While they strive in the cause Of our COUNTRE and CLAY. We are some of the lade who in '40 were true To the gallant Old Hero of Tippecance, Annapolis, Nov. 4, 1848.

From the Knickerbocker. TOUCHING SKETCH OF PARENTAL SORROW.

A LESSON FOR PARENTS.

A few months ago I buried my eldest son -a fine, manly boy, of eight years of age, who had never had a day's illness until that which took him hence to be seen no more. His death occurred under circumstances peculiarly painful to me. A younger brother, anybody crazy to listen to them songs the next in age to him, is a delicate, sickly child from a baby, had been down for nearly a fortnight, with an epidemic fever. In consequence of the nature of the disease, us devery precaution that prudence sug- sgainst the dog-iron, 'I will never vote gested, to guard the other members of the family against it. But of this one, my eld- wont rhyme in poetry. It's no wonder vorce, or the same will be taken pro confesso and est, I had but little fear: he was so rugg. Mr. Van Buren was best for his name ed, and generally healthy. Still however, wouldn't rhyme to any thing but ruin. I kept a vigilant eye upon bin, and especially forbid him going into the pools and docks, near his school, which he was prone

One evening I came home wearied with a ong day's hard labor, and sexed at some ittle disappointments, and found that he also had just come into the house, and that he was wet and covered with dock mud. I taxed him with dischedience, and scolded him severely-more so than I ever had before-and then harehly ordered him to bed He opened his lips for an explanatory reply. as I supposed, but I sternly checked him ;when, with a mute, sorrowful countenance, and a swelling breast, he turned slowly away and went to his chamber. My heart felt conscious of doing nothing but a moon at 5 o'clock. ather's duty. But how much keener did feel the pang, when I was informed in the evening, by a neighbor, that my boy had of a younger and favorite playmate, and by November Term 1848. the especial permission of his schoolmaster, in order to recover a cap belonging to the former which had blown off the wharf. Thus I learned, that what I had treated with unwonted severity as a fault, was but the impulse of a generous nature, which. It appearing to the satisfaction of the Court, that forgetful of self, had hazarded lefe for she of this state: It is ordered that publication he made for other. Everything I now see that belonged to him, reminds me of the lost one. Yester. day, I found some rude pencil sketchep which it was his delight to make for the amusement of his young brother; to-day in rummaging an old chest, I came across his boots, still covered with dock mud as when he last wore them; and every morning and evening I pass the ground where his voice rang the merriest among his playmates .-All these things speak so vividly of his ac tive life; but I cannot though I often try, recall any other expression on his face than that mute, mournful one, with which he turned from the the night I so harshly repulsed him. Then my heart bleeds afresh. O how careful should we all be, that in our daily conduct towards those little beings of the Law School. sent us by kind Providence, we are not laying up for ourselves the sources of many a bitter tear. How cautious, that neither by inconsiderate word or look, we unjustly grieve their generous feelings! And how guardedly ought we to weigh every act against its motive, lest in a moment of excitement we be led to mete out the venial errors of the heart, the punishment due only to wilful crime! Alas, perhaps few persons suspect how often the sudden blow, the fierce rebake, is answered by their children in tears, not of passion, not of physical or mental pain, but of a loving, of a grieved or outraged nature.

of 1840 a number of Locofocos were earnestly engaged in discussing the reasons why the Whigs had beaten them so badly in the preceding election. One insisted that it was because the people were such fools that they had all their sense taken away by the coon skin mummeries. Another declared it was not that so much as the bribery of thousands of voters by the banks and foreigners whilst a third asserted that the people had gone mad and had got drunk upon excitement and hard

'What do you think it was uncle Josh,' said the first one turning to a little humpbacked, gimlet eyed, frosty headed old man, who was sitting cross-legged by the fire, furiously chewing his quid of tobacco, and who seemed to be the Sir Oracle of the coterie.

REFER TO Hon D Cameron, Raleigh, N. U Wm. Boylan, Esq.

on February 23, 1844.
The design of this Institution is to afford a complete enurse of legal education for gentlemen intended for the Bar in any of the Linued States, and also saystemaric course of studies in commercial jurisprudence, for those who intend to devote themselves uxcourse of instruction for gentlemen intended for the Bar embraces the various branch s of Public and Comstitutional Law, Admiralty, Maritime. Equity, and Common Law, which are common to all the United States, with occasional illustrations of Foreign Julisprudence The course of instruction for gentlemen intended for the mercantile profession is more limited, and embraces the principal branches only of Commer cial Jurisprudence, to wit : the Law of Agency, of Parinership, of Bailments, of Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes, of Insurance, of Shipping, Navigation, and other Maritime concerns, and of Sales, and, if the student desire it, also of Constitutional Law. No public instruction is given in the local or peculiar municipal jarasprudence of any particular State; but the students are assisted by the Professors, as occasion may require, in their private study of the law and practice peculiar to their own States. The active labors of instruction are shared equally by Mr. Justice Srout, who is Dane Professor of Law in the University, and by Mr. GREENLEAF Royal Professor of Law, who has the immediate direction and superintendence

No examination and no particular course of previous study are necessary for admission; but the student is expected to produce testimonials of a good moral character. He also gives a bond in the sum of $200 to the Steward, with a surety resident in Massachusetts, for the payment of College dues ; or de posites, at his election. $150 with the Steward, at the commencement of each term.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits. But they are advised to enter at the beginning of those studies rather than at a later period, as the most useful to themselves. They may also elect what particular studies they will pursue.

The fees are at the rates of $50 a term, and $25 for half or any leaser fraction of a term; for which sum, without any additional charge, students have the use of the lecture rooms, the Law Library, containing upwards of $7.500 volumes, the College Li-THE REASON WHY - After the elec- brary, and the text-books: and they are admitted free to all the public I ctures in the University. They may also study any foreign language tought in the University for $10 per annum. The price of board varies from $2 25 to $3 50 per week, and of room rent from 75 cents to $1 25 per week. Fuel, pre pered for use, is furnished at cost, by the Steward, if the students desire it.

The Academical year, which commences on the Friday after the fourth Wednesday in August, is divided into two terms of twenty weeks each, with s varation of six weeks at the end of each term. All students who have pursued their studies in the Law School for three terms, or eighteen months, or who, after having been admitted to the bar, have pursued their studies in the Law School for one year, are entitled, upon the certificate and recommendation of the Law Faculty, to the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Cambridge, Mass. Jan. 12, 1844.
