Extract from the Speech of Hon. J. J. HARRIS, House of Representatives June 3d 1844.

"PRINCIPLES NOT MEN."

With all these facts staring us in the face in the history of your candidates, we yet hear it said, that the reason Mr. Van Buren was laid aside, and Mr. Polk taken up, was because your party goes for "principles not men." As this is one of the mottoes of modern Democracy, I propose briefly to examine your claims to it. Many of the resolutions passed at the recent Baltimore Convention, which are set forth as the articles of your creed, consist of such vague generalities, that nine-tenths of all parties will agree to them; and each member of your party is thus left at liberty to give them such a construction as will suit his latitude. The first resolution declares your opposition to "facitious symbols;" and yet, in the recent contest, in Tennessee, your party adopted Polk's storks and Polk bushes as their symbols, as they formerly did bickory bushes in the palmy days of Jacksonism. They next resolved themselves in favor of a strict construction of the Constitution; yet your party in Congress never had any difficulty in finding the Constitution broad enough to permit you to do anything you desired, from the annexation of a nation, down to the expunging of the journals of Congress. They next declare "that the Constitution does not confer upon Congress the power to commence and carry on a general system of Internal Improvements." I might refer, in explanation of this resolution, to the votes of a large number of your party in this and preceding Congresses, in favor of these improvements. But as you go for "principles not men," I will give you a commentary, in the political course of your candidate for Vice President Mr. G. M. Dallas. On the 25th of May, 1832 he voted, in the Senate, for a bill to subscribe on the part of the General Government, for stock in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. And on the 2d day of June, 1832, he voted for a bill making large appropriations for Internal Improvements by the General Government.

The resolutions in relation to the tariff, slavery, and economy in the administration of the Government are so vague and uncertain, that they mean any thing, or nothing, as each interpreter may desire. They next remarked "that Congress has no power to charter a National Bank." I will give you another commentary on this by referring to Mr. Dallas. On the 9th January, 1832, Mr. Dallas presented a memorial to the Senate from the United States Bank praying its recharter, and accompanied it with these remarks:

"He could not but feel strongly impressed by the recollection that the Legislature of Pennsylvania recently and in effect unanimously had recommended the recharter of the Bank. He came here a witness as he was virtually an instructed Agent in promoting, to the extent of his ability, an object, which however dangerously timed its introduction might seem to be itself entitled to every consideration and favor." (See Register of Debates, vol. xiii, Part I, p. 55.)

"March 18, 1832.—Mr. DALLAS, from the Select Committee, reported a bill to renew the charter of the Bank of the United States."
"May 23, 1832.—Mr. DALLAS made a speech in favor of the Bank, as constitutional and expedient."
Mr. Dallas voted for the bill to recharter the U. S. Bank, and when it was vetoed by President Jackson, he voted for its recharter notwithstanding the veto. Subsequently, Mr. Dallas turned against the old U. S. Bank, but he did not change his opinions about the constitutionality or expediency of such an institution, as is apparent from the following extract from a letter of his, addressed to some of the citizens of his own State, dated July 7, 1836.

"Of the Constitutional power of the National Government to create a BANK, I did not then, nor do I now entertain a doubt. Of the ability of Congress to create such a Bank as would be a safe machine of finance, and a serviceable agent in preserving a sound currency, I then, as I still am, am convinced."
"Another resolution is—
"That the separation of the moneys of the Government from banking institutions, is indispensable for the safety of the funds of the Government, and the rights of the people."

A fine commentary on this will be found in Col. Polk's speeches against the sub-Treasury, and in favor of the Deposit system. And also in the entire omission of acting on the sub-Treasury bill, which has remained on the table of this House for months past.

They next declare themselves opposed to materially altering our naturalization laws. So am I, and so are the great mass of the Whig party.
They also denounce the distribution of the proceeds of public lands, "as inexpedient in policy and repugnant to the Constitution." Mr. Dallas was in the Senate when Mr. Clay introduced his bill to distribute the proceeds of the public lands amongst the States, and he voted with Mr. Clay, and against the opponents of that measure, on every important amendment which was offered it. The bill finally passed July 3, 1832, Mr. Dallas voting for it.

JOB PRINTING
Neatly executed at this Office.

I now submit it to any candid Democrat, if this review of your resolutions is not a beautiful commentary on your motto of "principles not men." On the great constitutional questions of the bank, distribution, and internal improvements, your candidate for Vice President is directly in opposition to your resolutions. Your party have always boasted that "obedience to instructions" was one of its cardinal doctrines—yet, when from two-thirds to three-fourths of your Convention were directly instructed to nominate Mr. Van Buren, they disregarded their instructions, and elected a man never thought of for the office by any of those who appointed them. You proclaim as a fundamental principle, that "the majority should always rule"—yet in your Convention you trampled this principle under foot, and adopted a two-thirds rule, by which a minority of the convention actually defeated the nomination of a man who received a majority of all the votes of the Convention.

Why, sir, if any man will examine, he will find that the principles of your party leaders vary according to their latitudes, and sometimes according to States. In Pennsylvania and the North, they are for a protective tariff, and for the exclusive hard money currency. It was correctly said by a leading Loco editor of Ohio, that "the principles of Democracy are progressive." That which was Democracy a few years ago, is denounced as Federalism now; and the Democrat who has remained steadfast in the principles he entertained twelve years since, will find himself in the Whig ranks now.

The truth is, modern Democracy has changed all its doctrines, until there are none of its original principles left. It reminds me of Dominie Sampson's silk stockings. The Dominie prided himself very much on his silk stockings, and his careful house-keeper as the stockings wore out, not having the silk, darned them white, mixed, or black wool, as she had either most convenient at hand. In time, as the silk disappeared, its place was supplied with these parti-colored patches of wool, until there was not a particle of the original silk left. Yet the Dominie was as proud of them as ever, and on Sunday morning when he wished to dress very fine would always ask for his "black silk stockings." So it has been with "Democratic principles." From year to year, you have discarded some old, and patched the place with some new, parti-colored principle, to suit the views of party leaders, or the changes of popular sentiment, until now not a vestige of what was old fashioned Democracy is found to remain.

Mr. Chairman in the free examination I have made into the political course of Col. Polk, I have not sought to detract from his ability; nor have I ventured within the precincts of his private life, to blotken his character, and prejudice him in the minds of the American people. I would scorn to do so. I leave such work to Amos Kendall and other political scavengers, be they on this floor or elsewhere, who, feeling themselves destitute of the ability to meet the great political issues now before the public, gratify the party malice of ignoble minds, by attacking the private character of that great American statesman who is our candidate for the presidency. Sir, the country is too well acquainted with the character and services of Henry Clay to feel anything but disgust and to treat with anything but contempt, the newly created forgeries, and the old exploded falsehoods, which have been revivified to suit the present emergency of the party; his eminent services, during the last war; at the treaty of Ghent; in the settlement of the Missouri and nullification questions; and during a long course of public life; have endeared him to the hearts and confidence of the American people; and now that the mist of prejudice have been driven away by the voice of truth, the admiring world behold his name inscribed so high on the mount of fame, that none who seek to tarnish his reputation can reach the lowest letter which glitters in the inscription of his renown.

Nor have I, Mr. Chairman, attempted to defend or explain, the principles of my party. They need no exposition, and can be seen and known of all men. They could not be better known, were they written in letters of fire on the columns of your Capitol, and elevated, until they could be read at the farthest confines of the Republic. Based upon the immutable laws of truth, and of republican liberty, they will exist as landmarks for all practical statesmen, until the chain of this Union shall be severed by anarchy, or dissolved amidst the ruins of time. Contending for such principles, and with such a leader the Whigs bear not defeat, but look forward to certain and glorious triumph. Sir, in firmly maintaining and cementing the Union of these States, in devotion to the Constitution, and to the noble principles of our Government, we yield to none. The Whigs in the North, South, East and West are actuated by the purest and noblest purposes; and let danger lower over our horizon, coming from what quarter of the earth it may in the shape of open war from abroad, or intestine dissension from within; firmly trusting and believing that our country will continue to be in the right as she always has been heretofore; of the motto of the Whigs will float aloft on their banners—our country first—our country last—and by that country, in every contest, we will stand forever.

Notice to Travellers going North, via Portsmouth and H. R. Road and Bay Line Steamers.
We would respectfully state to the travelling public, that we are disposed, and will carry on as cheap as any other line, to Portsmouth or Baltimore.

Our Road is run over with as much success as any in the country—our Boats on the Bay are of the first class, and commanded by experienced and attentive Officers; the Stages and Teams (between Raleigh and Weldon, 14 miles) are good—drivers obliging, and the road a good one; and the traveller may rest assured nothing shall be wanting on our part to make their trip pleasant and safe.
We shall not be governed by what may be charged the traveller from Gaston to Baltimore, but what he is charged from Weldon.
Fare at present from Sledge's to Baltimore, $9, (meals included on the Bay Boat.)
Should any further reductions be made by our opponents, with a view to divert the travel from this comfortable and expeditious route, we ask the travel to come over to Weldon, and they will only be charged from Sledge's what others pay from this place.
Our not defaming the upper route, I am satisfied, will not do violence to the feelings of the travelling community. We cannot play such a game. Such means to secure patronage is not sanctioned by the Company.
Passengers are guarded against getting Tickets in Raleigh through to Petersburg—as if they should change their route after leaving Raleigh, they must do so at a sacrifice of amount paid to carry them from Gaston to Petersburg.
