YOUNG IHCKORY AND HIS MAMA.

When Pour, to govern Tennessce, Set up his claims so roundly, Th' old lady took him o'er her knee, And twice she thrashed him soundly.

The Whig boys stood around and laughed The sport they all remember:

She beat him well in forty-three-We'll beat him in November.

THE THREE JOLLY HUSBANDS.

Three jolly husbands, out in the country, by the name of Tim Watson, Joe Brown and Bill Walker, sat late one evening drinking at the village tavera, until being pretty well corned, they agreed that each one returning home should do the first thing his wife to'd him, in default of which he should next morning pay the bill. They then separated for the night, engaging to meet again next morning, and give an honest account of their proceedings at home, so far as they related to the

The next morning Walker and Brown were early at their posts; but it was sometime before Watson made his appearance. Walk. er began first :

lyinto a pot of batter the pancakes were to be said to me sarcastically:

" Bill, do put your foot in the batter." "Just us you say, Maggy," said I, and without the least hesitation, I put my foot into the pot of batter, and then went to Next Joe Brown told his story; " My wife had already retired in our usual sleeping room which adjoins the kitchen, able to navigate perfectly, you know, I made a dreadful clattering among the household furniture, and my wife in no very pleasant tone bawled out :

Do break the porridge pot.

broke it into a hundred pieces. After this exploit I retired to rest, and got a curtain ecture all night for my pains."

It was now 'I'm Watson's turn to give an account of himself, which he did with a very long face, as follows:

"My wife gave the most unlucky command in the world; for I was blundering up blairs in the dark when she cried out:
'Do break your neck, Tim.'

'I'll be cursed if I do Kate,' said I, as I gethered inviself up; ' I'll sooner pay the bill. And so, landlord, here's the cash for you; and this is the last time I'll ever risk five dollars on the command of my wife."

The Schoolmaster at it Again.-We see the following outrage going the rounds of the papers, -the name of the guilty person has not come to our knowledge:

Schoolmaster.- "A passive verb is expressive of the nature of receiving an action -as Peter is Court House door in Smithfield. beaten. Now, what did Peter do ?"

Boy-" Well, I don't know," said the urchin pausing a moment, with the gravest countenance inaginable, "unless he hollowed!"

GENERAL JACKSON.

got into the stage with us not far from the May Term, A. D., 1844. heritage, to go to Nashville, and who had lived near General Jackson betwixt twenty and thirty years, gave us a very interesting account of this distinguished man; which making allowances for the partiality of a man, always up to all his undertakings, and iness engagements : that his private conduct was remarkable for uniformly inclining to do justice, generosity, and humanity: that he was an excellent master to his slaves, and never permitted his overseers to ill-treat them. As to his house, he said it was constantly full of people, being in fact open to FIELD & TAPPEN everybody; those whom he had never heard of before being asked to dine when they called, and those they had room for being always furnished with beds. For these reasons, he said everybody respected him, and most people loved him. As to his public conduct he observed that he was rather an uncompre mising man, and liked to have his own way but that his own way was always a very good one, and a very sensible one, if he was left to himself. He was a man of atrong passions, and had once been very much addicted to cock-fighting, horse-racing, and "consider." ble cursing and swearing," but that he had quit all these " and was in parcent about Quit all these," and was in earnest about doing good to the country. And he added!

that if the general was not always right, it was to be laid to the score of some of his political friends, who imposed upon him for their own private ends, a thing not very difficult to do, because when he thought a man his friend he was too apt to go great lengths with him. These remarks, which fell from our fellow-traveller in quite a sensible manhave observed and seen of one of the most remarkable men the United States have yet produced, that I listened willingly to a very curious account he gave me of some incidents of the general's early life, which, I believe, have been greatly misrepresented .- Featherstonhaugh's Excursion through the United
