From late English Papers received at the Office of the Freeman's Journal,

LIVERPOOL, Jan 26.

Death of Vizier Ally.

Among the deaths mentioned in the Calcutta papers, we find that of Vizier Ally, once Nabob of Oude; but being deposed by the East India Company, was subsequently, and in consequence of the treacherous murder of Mr. Cherry and others, at Benares, confined for life in a room made to resemble an iron cage, in Fort William, where he lingered out an imprisonment of 17 years, 3 months and 4 days. He died in May last, at the age of only 36—As a relation of the vicissitudes of fortune which this young man experienced, with the circumstance of long imprisonment, will prove interesting to the reader, we shall here subjoin it.

Vizier Ally was the adopted son of Asuf ud Dowlah, late Nabob of Oude. His mother was the wife of a Florash, (a menial servant of low description, employed in India in keeping the metallic furniture of a house clean) His reputed father, Asuf ud Dowlah, was a wealthy and eccentric Prince. Having succeeded to the musnud (throne) of Oude, by the assistance of the East India India Company, he professed great partiality to the English. Mild in manners, polite and affable in his conduct, he possessed a great mental powers; his heart was good, considering his education, which instilled the most despotic ideas. He was fond of lavishing his treasures on gardens, palaces, horses, elephants, European guss lustres, and mirrors. He expended every year about 200,000 in English manufactures. This Nabob had more than 100 gardens, 20 palaces, 1,200 elephants, 3,000 fine saddle horses, 1,500 double barrel guns, 1,700 lustres, 30,000 shades of various forms and colors, several hundred large mirrors, girandoles and clocks; some of the latter were very curious, richly set with jewels, having figures in continual movement, and playing tunes every hour; two of these clocks cost him 730,000.—Without taste and judgment, he was extremely solicitous to possess all that was elegant and rare he had instruments and machines of every art and science, but he knew none; and his museum was so ridiculously disposed, that a wooden cuckoo clock was placed close to a superb time piece which cost the price of a diadem; and a valuable landscape of Claude Lorraine, suspended near a board painted with ducks and drakes.—He sometimes gave a dinner to ten or twelve persons, sitting at their ease in a carriage drawn by elephants. His harem contained above 500 of the greatest beauties of India, immured in high walls, which they were never to leave, except on their biers. He had an immense number of domestic servants, and a very large army, besides being fully protected from hostile invasion by the Company's subsidiary forces, for which he paid 500,000 per annum.—His jewels amounted to about eight millions sterling. Amidst this precious treasure, he might be seen for several hours every day, handling them as a child does his toys. Asuf had no legitimate children, and it was doubted whether he had any natural ones.—He was in the habit, whenever he saw a pregnant woman, whose appearance struck his fancy, to invite her to the palace to lie in, and several women of this description were delivered there, and among the number was the mother of Vizier Ally. Several children so delivered were brought up and educated in the palace.

The sprightliness of Vizier Ally, while yet an infant, so entirely engrossed the affections of the old Nabob, that he determined to adopt him. In conformity with this resolution, the youth received an education suitable to a Prince who was destined to succeed to the musnud. He is said, however, to have developed at this period, a propensity to delirium in the sufferings of the brute creation. The affection of the old Nabob towards his adopted son still increasing, he lavished upon him every mark of regard.

At 13 his marriage took place. To give an idea of the splendor which attached to his youth, and from which he subsequently fell the following account of his nuptials is extracted from Forbes's "Oriental Memoirs."

The wedding of Vizier Ally was celebrated at Lucknow, in 1795, and was one of the most magnificent in modern times.—The Nabob had his tents pitched on the plains, near the city of Lucknow; among the number were two remarkably large, made of large cotton cloth, lined with the finest English broad cloth, cut in stripes of different colours, with cords of silk and cotton. These two tents cost five lacks of rupees, or above fifty thousand pounds sterling; they were each 120 feet long, 60 broad; and the poles about 60 feet high; the walls of the tents were ten feet high; part of them were cut into lattice work for the women of the Nabob's seraglio, and those of the principal nobility, to see through. His highness was covered with jewels to the amount, at least, of two millions sterling. From thence we removed to the shumeecana, which was illuminated by two hundred elegant girandoles from Europe, as many glass shades with wax candles, and several hundred flambeaux; the glare & reflection was dazzling and offensive to the sight. When seated under the extensive canopy, above a hundred dancing girls, richly dressed, went through their elegant, but rather lascivious dances and motions, and sung some soft airs of the country, chiefly Persian and Hindoo Persian.

About seven o'clock, the bridegroom, Vizier Ally, the young Nabob, made his appearance so absurdly loaded with jewels, that he could scarcely stagger under the precious weight. The bridegroom was about thirteen years of age, the bride ten; they were both of a dark complexion, and not handsome.

From the shumeecana we proceeded on elephants to an extensive and beautiful garden, about a mile distant. The procession was grand beyond description; it consisted of about twelve hundred elephants, richly caparisoned, drawn up in regular line like a regiment of soldiers. About a hundred elephants in the centre had houdahs, or castles, covered with silver; in the midst of these appeared the Nabob, mounted on an uncommonly large elephant, within a houdah, covered with gold, richly set with precious stones. The elephant was caparisoned with cloth of gold. On his right hand was Mr George Johnstone, the British resident at Lucknow; on his left the young bridegroom: the English gentlemen and ladies, and the native nobility, were intermixed on the right and left. On both sides of the road, from the tents to the garden, were raised artificial scenery of bamboo work, very high, representing bastions, arches, minarets & towers, covered with lights in glass lamps, which made a grand display. On each side of the procession, in front of the line of elephants, were dancing girls, superbly dressed, (on platforms supported and carried by bearers) who danced as we went along.—These Platforms consisted of a hundred on each side of the procession, all covered with gold & silver cloths, with two girls and two musicians at each platform.

The ground from the tents to the garden, forming the road on which we moved, was intaid with fire works; at every step of the elephants the earth burst before us, and threw up artificial stars in the heavens, to emulate those created by the hand of Providence besides innumerable rockets, and many hundred wooden shells that burst in the air, and shot forth a thousand fiery serpents; these winding through the atmosphere, illuminated the sky, and aided by the light of the bamboo scenery, turned a dark night into a bright day. The procession moved on very slowly, to give time for the fire works to go off. The whole of this grand scene was further lighted with above three thousand flambeaux, carried by men hired for the occasion. In this manner we moved on in stately pomp to the garden, which, though only a mile off, we took two hours to reach. When we arrived at the garden gate we descended from the elephants and entered the garden, illuminated by innumerable transparent lamps or lanterns of various colours, suspended to the branches of the trees. In the centre of the garden was a large edifice, to which we ascended, & were introduced into a grand saloon, adorned with girandoles and pendant lustres of English manufacture, lighted with wax candles. Here we had an elegant & sumptuous collation of European and Indian dishes, with wines, fruits, and sweetmeats; at the same time about a hundred dancing girls sung their sprightly airs and performed their native dances.

Thus passed the time until dawn, when we all returned to our respective homes delighted and wonder struck with the enchanting scene, which surpassed in splendour every entertainment of the kind beheld in this country.—The affable Nabob slightly observed, with a little Asiatic vanity, that such a spectacle was never before seen in India, and never would be seen again. The whole expense of this marriage feast, which was repeated for three successive nights in the same manner, cost upwards of 300,000 sterling.

When the Vizier Ally was recognized by Asuf as his successor to the throne, great opposition was manifested by the old Nabob's family. He was, however, upheld by the English government and placed on the throne. An adopted child, by the Mahomedan Law, is entitled to all the privileges of legitimate birth. Vizier Ally, after being placed on the throne, shewed a turbulent, restless and infringing temper, and broke his faith with the English government; the consequence of which was, his being deposed from the Musnud, and Sadur Ally, the brother of the late Nabob, was placed on it. A pension was assigned to Vizier Ally, of two lacks of rupees per annum, about twenty five thousand pounds; but it was considered necessary that he should reside near the Presidency that he might be the more under the eye of government. He in consequence proceeded from
