

NORFOLK, October, 22 1793.

POET'S CORNER.
IMITATION OF HORACE.

ODE 9th, BOOK 1st.

BEHOLD the mountains white with snow,
And white the vallies all below—
The forest nodding to the ground,
And firm in ice the rivers bound.

Charles, rouse the fire, dispel the cold,
And bring Methuslan four years old—
Enjoy to day, nor anxious seek,
The fortunes of another week.

But think your lot was kindly thrown,
If you can call to day your own.

While others barter bliss for fame,
Be HAPPINESS your only aim;
Nor, seated by your cheerful fire,
Of news or politics enquire—
Whether in parties feuds run high,
Or GENET'S threats neglected lie.

Be happy—join the lively throng—
Tread the DANCE and aile the SONG—
Devote to mirth the youthful day,
For youth is swift to pass away—
Your tender heart let BEAUTY move,
And press the LIP, that talks of LOVE!

How pleasing when the blooming maid
Is in the social play betrap'd
And innocently fond blifs,
With faint reluctance yields the KISS!
In YOUTH such scenes of pleasure share
And leave to AGE the brow of CARE

EXTRACT

THE Man in the Moon, after the breaking up of the Congress, falls into the hands of the wild Arabs, who carry him as a slave into the mountains of Ughela; from whence, however, after living for some time in a most humiliating state, he makes his escape, and is picked up as a curiosity, by the Hierophant already described, who carries him behind him on his Mamnuth, through a fine and fertile vale, in the widely-extended regions of Mammuthia, over which vale he presided as an elective king, to his royal residence, which was a kind of nest formed in a grove of trees, on the summit of a lofty mountain. Every vegetable and animal production in Mammuthia is on a large scale, and the turn of thinking, and the modes of life of the inhabitants, in the highest degree singular, being in many instances the very reverse of ours, and yet such as are made to appear by our traveller extremely natural and reasonable.—Amidst the oddest and most extravagant fancies, he introduces many particulars that seem almost as extravagant, which are, nevertheless, realized at this day, in some parts of the world, or recorded in history. In the course of conversation between the Man in the Moon, and the Hierophant, who entertains many of the notions of the Pythagorean philosophers, Lord Monbodo is introduced of whose nostrums and character our author gives a very just account in a very humorous manner.

THE subscriber informs the public that he continues to inspect country produce: and will, at all times, attend the commands of his friends, at any place within the limits of the town.

He is prepared with several sets of scales and weights; and has numbers of packers and coopers, always ready to attend him; he has also a quantity of barrels and halt barrels, of the exact size, for sale.

His charges for coopering and packing pork or beef will be 6d. per barrel.

AGREEABLE to the intimation already given many of my friends here, and in other parts of the Continent, of my intention to establish myself as an in this place, and flattered by their encouragement, I have actually commenced the business, and am happy in embracing this early opportunity of publicly advising those Gentlemen who may have any orders to execute in the above line.

The commercial importance of this state, from its various and extensive exports and imports, to clearly points out the utility of this institution, that it need hardly be mentioned to men of business, to force a conviction of its importance.

As I intend to pay strict attention to this business I hope to have it the more in my power to serve my friends, whose orders and interest I shall ever attend to with punctuality and fidelity, and thereby alone hope to merit their favours.

Any orders my friends may find convenient to favor me with will at all times be thankfully received and carefully attended to, by their
