

Selected Poetry.

TAKE NOTICE, A WIFE WANTED!
WANTED, for many a useful end,
 By me a lovely Female friend,
 To smooth the tedious path of life,
 Namely a kind obliging wife,
 If rich or poor, I do not care,
 If conscious merit is her share,
 Of size and Beauty of waist,
 I am not curious in my taste,
 But then I chafe a leg not broke,
 By any former carnal stroke,
 Her age, I do conclude may do!
 From sixteen until Twenty-two,
 Her height not high, nor meanly low,
 Not over fond of Public show,
 No view for scolding let her bring,
 For I had rather hear her sing,
 From too much pride let her be free,
 Then possibly we may agree;
 If in her cooking she is neat,
 And also in her dress compleat;
 Well skill'd in useful exercise,
 With rosy cheeks, and handsome eyes,
 Her countenance, not over white,
 But every natural shade just right,
 Her hair in graceful ringlets flow,
 And shade the little bits of snow,
 With these accomplishments than this,
 May come, I think we shall agree, True English blood, will suit me best,
 By Jove, I do regard the rest,
 Those who are fond of this connection
 Or not, let them, I'll give protection, But then dear Ladies, this remember To come the first of next November, Then Ladies bring your several names,
 I will attend unto your claims;
 The one who suits me then the best,
 I'll take, and then dismiss the rest:
 A wife with me, I hope will lie!
 Ere Wint'ry Clouds, obscure the sky,
 Ere bleak December's shivering gale, Destroys the comforts of the Vale, Winter shall give me no alarms,
 If my dear wife sleeps in my arms.
 Thrice happy pair who do conform To keep each other snug and warm."

PRICE & STROTHER,

BEG leave to inform their friends and the public in general, that their Chart of the sea coast, extending from cape Henry to cape Roman, is now ready for the engraver; and at the same time to acquaint them, that the vast expence and labour they have been at, compels them to call on the friend of trade and navigation for their support in so arduous an undertaking, which they doubt not they will receive, when the promoters of the fine arts consider the utility of an actual survey, that will include all the shoals, capes, soundings and inlets in North-Carolina, together with the principal rivers and creeks, as far as they are navigable for sea vessels.

Any gentleman willing to see the original, will please to call on Mr. William Johnston, from whom the terms of subscription will be known.
