

Selected Poetry.

ELEGANT SONNET.

BY THE EARL OF ORFORD.

AS the Mole's silent train crept pensive along,
And the winds murrur'd solemn the willows among,
On the green turf complaining a Swain lay reclin'd—
And wept to the River, and sigh'd to the Wind.

In vain (he cry'd) Nature has waken'd the Spring,
In vain blooms the Violet, the Nightingales sing;
To a heart full of Sorrow no Beauties appear—
Each Zephyr's a Sigh, and each Dew Drops a Tear!

In vain my SOPHIA has graces to move,
The Fairest to envy, the wisest to love;
Her presence no longer gives joy to my eye,
Since without her to live, is more pain than to die!

O, that SLUMBER his pinions would over me spread,
And paint but her image, in dreams, in her stead!
The beautiful vision would soften my pain!
But Sleep's a relief I solicit in vain!

NATHAN SMITH.

PRICE & STROTHER,

BEG leave to inform their friends and the public in general, that their Chart of the sea coast, extending from cape Henry to cape Roman, is now ready for the engraver;
and at the same time to acquaint them, that the vast expence and labour they have been at, compels them to call on the friend of trade and navigation for their support in so arduous an undertaking, which they doubt not they will receive, when the promoters of the fine arts consider the utility of an actual survey, that will include all the shoals, capes, foundings and inlets in North-Carolina, together with the principal rivers and creeks,
as far as they are navigable for sea vessels.

Any gentleman wishing to see the original,
will please to call on Mr. William Johnston, from whom the terms of subscription will be known.
