TEXT: "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar,"-John xix., 30.

The brigands of Jerusalem had done their work. It was aimost sundown, and Jesus was dying. Fersons in crucifiction often lingered on from day to day—crying, begging, cursing; but Christ had been exhausted by years of maltreatment. Pillowless, poorly fed flogged-as bent over and tied to a low post-His bare back was inflamed with the scourges intersticed with pieces of lead and bone and now for whole hours, the weight of his body hung on delicate tendons, and, according to custom, a violent stroke under the armpits had been given by the exe utioner. Dizzy, swooning, nauseated, feverish—a world of agony is compressed in the two words: "I thirst!" O skies of Judea, let a drop of rain strike on His burning tongue. O world, with rolling rivers, and sparkling lakes, and spraying fountains, give Jesus something to drink. If there be any pity in earth, or heaven, or hell, let it now be demonstrated in behalf of this royal sufferer. The wealthy women of Jerusalem used to have a fund of money with which they provided wine for those people who died in crucifixion-a powerful opiate to deaden the pain; but Christ would not take it. He wanted to die sober, and so He refused the wine. But afterward they go to a cup of vinegar and soak a sponge in it, and put it on a stick of hyssop, and then press it against the hot lips of Christ. You say the wine was an anaesthetic, and intended to relieve or deaden the pain. But the vinegar was an insult. I am disposed to adopt the theory of the old English commentator, who believed that in-tead of its being an

Skies flambovant. Days resilient. But in a great many cases there The annoyances, and the vexations. and the disappointments of life overpower the successes. There is a gravel in almost every shoe. An Arabian legend says that there was a worm in Solomon's staff, gnawing its strength away; and there is a weak spot in every earthly support that a man leans on. King George, of Eng-addressed him as a servant crying: "George, ring the bell!" Miss Langdon, honored all the world over for her poetic genius, is so worried over the evil reports set affoat regarding her, that she is found dead, with an empty bottle of prussic acid in her hand. Goldsmith said that his life was a wretched being, and that all that want and contempt could bring to it had been brought, and cries out: "What, then, is there formidable in a jail!" Correggio's fine painting is hung up for a tavern sign. Hogarth cannot s ll his best paintings except through a raffle. Andrew Delsart makes the great frescoe in the Church of the Annunciata, at Florence, and gets for pay a sack of corn; and there are annoyances and vexations in high places as well as in low places, showing that in a great many lives the sours are greater than the sweets. "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar.' It is absurd to suppose that a man who has always been well can sympathize with those who are sick; or that one who has always been honored can appreciate the sorrow of those who are despised; or that one who has been born to a goeat fortune can understand the distress and the straits of those who are destitute. The fact that Christ Himself, took the vinegar, makes Him able to symputhize to-day and forever with all those whose cup is filled with sharp acids of this life. He took the vinegar. In the first place, there is the sourness o betrayal. The treachery of Judas hurt Christ's feelings more than all the friendship of His disciples did Him good. You have had many friends; but there was one friend upon whom you put especial stress. You feasted him. You loaned him money. You befriended him in the dark passes of life, when he especially needed a friend. Afterward he turned upon you, and he took advantage of your former intimacies. He wrote against you. He talked against you. ' He microsco-pized your faults. He flung contempt at you an you ought to have received nothing but litude. At first, you could not sleep at mghts. Then you went about with a sense of having been stung. That difficulty will never be healed, for though mutual friends may arbitrate in the matter until you shall shake hands, the o'd cordiality will never come back. Now, I commend to all such the sympathy of a betrayed Christ. Why, they sold Him for less than our twenty dollars They al forsook Him, and fled. They cut Him to the quick. He drank that cup of betraval to the dregs. He took the vinegar. There is also the sourness of pain. There are some of you who have not seen a well day for many years. By keeping out of draughts, and by carefully studying dietetics, you continue to this time; but, O, the head ches, and the sideaches, and the backaches. ad the heartaches which have been you secompaniment all the way through! You have strugg'el under a heavy mostrage of physical disabilities, and in tead of the placidity that once characterized you, it is now only with great effort that you keep away from irritability and sharp retort. Dificulties of respiration, of digestion, of locomotion, make up the great obstacle in your life, and you tuz and sweat along the pathway, and wonder when the exhaustion will end. My friends, the brightest crowns in heaven will not be given to those who, in stirrups, dashed to the cavalry charge, while the general applaude I, and the sound of clashing sibres rang through the land; but the brightest crowns in heaven, I believe, will be given to those who trudged on anid chronic ailments which unnerved their strength, yet all the time maintaining their faith in God. It is comparatively easy to fight in a regiment of a thousand men, charging upon the para sets to the sound of martial music; but it is not so easy to endure when no one but the nurse and the doctor are the witnesses of the Christian fortitule. Besides that you never had any pains worse than Christ's. The sharpnesses that stung through His brain, through His hands, through His feet, through His heart, were as great as yours certainly. He was as sick and as weary. Not a nerve, or muscle, or ligament escaped. All the pangs of all the nations of all the ages compressed into one sour cup. He took the vine There is also the sourness of poverty. Your income does not meet your outgoings, and that always gives an honest man anxiety, There is no sign of destitution about youpleasant appearance, and a cheerful home for you; but God only knows what a time you have had to manage your private finances. Just as the bills run up, the wages seem to run down. you are not the only one who has not been paid for hard work. The great Wilkie sold his celebrated piece, "The Blind Fiddler," for fifty guineas, although afterward it brought its thousands. The world hangs in admiration over the sketch of Gainsborough, vet that very sketch hung for years in the shop window because there was not any purchaser. Oliver foldsmith sold his "Vicar of Wakedeld" for a few pounds in order to keep the bailiff out of the door; and the vast majority of men in all occupations and professions are not fully paid for their work. You may say nothing, but life to you is a hard push; and when you sit down with your wife an I talk over the expenses. you both rise and dis ouraged You abridge here, and you abridge there, and you get things snug for smooth sailings, and lo! caddenly tnere is a large doctor's bill to pay, or you there is a large doctor's bill to pay, or you have lost your pocket book, or some creditor has failed, and you are thrown a-beam end. Well, brother, you are in glorious company. Christ owned not the house in which he stopped, or the colt on which He rode, or the boat in which he sailed. He lived in a borrowed house; He was buried in a borrowed grave. Exposed to all kinds of rowed grave. Exposed to all kinds of weather, yet He had only one suit of clothes. He breakfasted in the morning, and no one could poss by tell where He could get anything to eat before night. He would have been pronounced a financial failure. He had to perform a miracle to get money to pay a tax-bill. Not a d llar did He own. Privation of domesticity; privation of nutritious food; privation of a comfortable couch on which to sleep; privation of all worldly resources. The kings of the earth had chased chalices out of which to drink; but Christ had nothing but a plain cup set before Him, and it was very sharp, and it was very sour. He took the vinegar. There also is the sourness of bereavement. There were years that passed along before your family circle was invaded by death, but the moment the charmed circle was broken, everything seemed to dissolve. Haally have you put the black apparel in the wardrobe, before you have again to take it out. Great and rapid changes in your family record. You got the house and rejoiced in it, but the charm was gone as soon as the crape hung on the door-bell. The one upon whom you most de pended was taken away from you. A cold marble slab lies on your heart to-day. Once, as the children romped through the house you put your hand over your aching head, and said: "Oh, if I could only have it still." Oh, it is too still now, You lost your patience when the tops, and the str ngs, and the shells were left amid floor; but oh, you would be willing to have the trinkets scattered all over the floor again, if they were scattered by the same hands With what a ruthless ploughshare bereavement rips up the heart But Jesus knows all about that. You cannot tell him anything new in regard to bereavement. He had only a few friends, and when He lost one it brought tears to His eyes. Lazarus had often entertained Him at his house. Now Lazarus is dead and buried, of the and Christ breaks down with emotion—the of it. convulsion of grief shuddering through all the ages of bereavement. Christ knows what it is to go through the house missing a familiar inmate. Christ knows what it is to see an unoccupied place at the table. Were there not four of them-Mary and Martha, and Christ and Lazarus? Lonely and afflicted Christ, His great loving eyes filled with ars, which drop from eye to cheek, and from cheek to beard, and from beard to robe, and from robe to floor. Oh, yes, yes,

He knows all about the loneliness and the heartbreak. He took the vinegar! Then there is the sourness of the death hour. Whatever else we may escape, that acid-sponge will be pressed to our lips. sometimes have a curiosity to know how will behave when I come to die. Whether will be calm or excited-whether I will filled with reministence or anticipation. cannot say. But come to the point, must and you must. In the six thou and years that have passed, on'y two persons have got into the eternal world without death, and I do not suppose that God is going to send a carriage for us with horses of flame, to draw us up the steeps of heaven; but I suppose we will have to go like the preceding generawill knock at the door of our heart and serve on us the writ of ejectment, and we will have to surrender. And we will wake up after these autumnal, and wintry, and vernal, and summery glories have vanished from our vision-we will wake up into a realm which has only one season, and that the season of everlasting love. But you say: "I don't want to break out from my present associations. It is so chilly and so damp to go down the stairs of that vault. I don't want anything drawn so tightly over my eyes. I there were only some way of breaking through the partition between worlds with out tearing this body all to shreds. wonder if the surgeons and the doctors cannot compound a mixture by which this body and soul can all the time be kept together? Is there no escape from this separation?" None; absolutely none. So I look over this audience to-day the vast majority of you seeming in good health and spirits-and vet I realize that in a short time all of us will be gone-gone from earth, and gone for ever. A great many men tumble through the gates of the future, as it were, and we do not know where they have gone, and they only add gloom and mystery to the passage; but Jesus Christ so mightily stormed the gates of that future world, that they have never since been closely shut. Christ knows what it is to leave this world, of the beauty of which He was more appreciative than we ever could be. He knows the exquisiteness of the phosphoresence of the sea; He trod it. He knows the glories of the midnight heavens: for they were the spangled canopy of His wilderness pillow. He knows about the lilies. He twisted them into His sermon. He knows about the fowls of the air; they whirred their way through his discourse He knows about the sorrows of leaving this beautiful world. Not a taper was kindled in the darkness. He died physicianless. He died in cold sweat, and dizziness, and hemor rhage, and agony that have put Him in sympathy with all the dying. He goes through Christendom, and He gathers up the stings out of all the death pillows, and He pu's them under his own neck and head. gathers on His own tengue the burning thirsts of many generations. The sponge is soaked in the sorrows of all those who pershed in icy or fiery martyrdom. While heaven was pitying, and earth was mocking. and hell was deriding, He took the vinegar To all those in this audience to whom life has been an acerbity-a dose they could not swallow, a draught that set their teeth on edge and a rasping-I preach the omnipotent sympathy of Jesus Christ. The sister of Herschel, the astronomer, use1 to help him in his work. He got all the credit; she got none. She used to spend much of her time polishing the telescopes through which he brought the distant worlds nigh, and it is my ambition now, this hour, to c'ear the lens of your spiritual vision, so that looking through the dark night of your eartfily troubles you may behold the glorious constallation of a Saviour's mercy and a Saviour's love. O, my friends, do not try to carry all your ills Do not put your poor shoulder under the Apennines when the Almighty Christ is this man will say about it, and what that man will say about it; and you try this prescription, and that prescription, and the other prescription. O, why do you not go straight to the heart of Christ, knowing that for our own sinning and suffering race, He took the vinegar. there was a vessel that had been tossed on the saas for a great many weeks, and been disabled, and the supply of water gave out, and the crew were dying of thirst. After many days, they saw a sail against the sky. They signaled it. When the vessel came nearer, the people on the suffering ship cried to the captain of the other vessel: us some water. We are dying for lack of water." And the captain on the vessel that was hailed responded: "Dip your buckets where you are. You are in the mouth of the Amazon, and there are scores of miles of fresh water all around about you, and hundreds of feet deep." And then they dropped their buckets over the side of the vessel, and brought up t'e clear, bright, fresh water and put out the fire of their thirst. So I had you to-day, after a long and perilous voyage, thirsting as you are for parton, and thirsting for comfort, and thirsting for eternal life; and I as : you what is the use of your going in that death-struck state, ready to lift up all your burdens. When you have a burden of any kind, you rush this way and that way; and you wonder what sparkling floo l of God's sympathetic mercy. O, dip your buckets, and drink, and live for take of the water of life freely." Yet my utterance is almost choked at the hought that there are people here who will refuse this divine sympathy; and they will try to fight their own battles, and drink their own vinegar, and carry their own burdens; and their life, instead of being while a'l around you is the deep, clear, wide, a triumphal march from victory to victory will be a hobbling-on from defeat to defeat, until they make final surrender to retributive disaster. O, I wish I could to-day gather up my arms all the woes of men and women-all their heart-aches—all their disappoint ments-all their chagrins-and just take them right to the feet of a sympathizing

Jesus. He took the vinegar. Nana Sahib, after he had lost his last bat tle in India, fell back into the jungles of Iher-jungles so full of malaria that no mortal can live there. He carried with him also a ruby of great lustre and of great value. He died in those jungles, his body was never found, and the ruby has never yet been recovered. And I fear that to day there are some who will fall back from this subject into the sickening. killing jungles of their s.n. carrying g gem of infinite value—a priceless soul—to be lost forever. O, that that ruby might flash in the eternal coronation. But no There are some, I fear, in this andience who turn away from this offered mercy, and comfort, and Divine sympathy: notwithstanding that Christ, for all who would accept His grace, trudged the long way, and suffered the lacerating thengs, and received in His face the expectorations of the filthy mob, and for the guilty, and the discour-aged, and the discomforted of the race, took the vinegar. May God Almighty break the infatuation, and lead you out into the strong hope, and the good cheer, and the glorious sunshine of this triumphant Gospel.

NEW "TWENTIES."

Very Handsome Silver Certificates of the Bureau of Engraving.

Four thousand of the new twenty dollar silver certificates have been printed and will soon be put in general circulation by the Treasury department. The new cirtificate is a pretty note, and is so finely executed it will be difficult to counterfeit it. Mr. Graves. the Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and Mr. O'Neill, the Superintenof the Engraving Division, are both proud

The centre is a fine oval portrait of Secretary Manning. On either side of the portrait are figures representing labor and prosperity. Labor, on the right of the portrait, is represented by a brawny workman with a hammer in his hands. Prosperity is represented by a female form in repose, surrounded by the abundant products of the earth. The word silver" aprears above the portrait and 'certificate" below it, both in plain open

In the upper left hand corner are the usual words setting forth the character of the certificate in Roman letters of an ornate and angular type. In the upper right hand corner is a lathe counter bearing the figures The border is engraved in the form of a reed, with the words "silver dollars" and the figures "20" worked in at regular intervals.

The certificate, like most of those recently issued, has the space for the number in diagonally opposite corners, so that which ever way the note is torn the number is almost certain to be left on either pieca. The back of the certificate has a sort of octagon arrangement encircled by a geomet rical lathe border. The background is of cycloidal ruling and the figures "20" app ar in a circle in each corner. There is a special plate in the middle of the lower edge bearing the words "Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Washington, D. C."

BOILER EXPLOSION.

Three Men Lose Their Lives and Others are Badly Hurt.

Shortly before seven o'clock Monday morning a tremendous report startled the residents of Allentown, Pa., in the vicinity of the Adelaide Silk Mill. The brick boiler house in the rear was split open and wrecked and amid the steam and dust huge pieces of boiler iron were hurled in the air a distance of three hundred feet.

Boiler No 2 of the nest of six exploded just as the 925 operatives were coming to work. About one hundred girls on the top floors had already arrived, and just after the shock they becam panicstricken, and would have jumped from the windows had not the foremen prevented them. Firemen and others rushed to the boiler house, and amid the roar of escaping steam searched the debris for the killed and wounded. Hiram Sell, the engineer, was caught by the crank of the engine and pinned down. His left leg was horribly crushed, and had to be amputated before he could be released. He died shortly afterward of internal injuries and burns. He was forty years old, and leaves a wife and five children The dead bodies of Frank P. Sterner and Henry Bohrans, the two firemen, were covered with bricks, ashes and iron, and weretaken out after two hours' work. Sterner was forty one years o'd and leaves a wife and one child. Bohrans was twenty-seven years old and leaves a wife and two children, one born last night. Robert Hilliard, a fireman, and Oswin Sacks were found lying in the ruins of the boiler house very badly hurt and scalded. It is believed they will recover. Jacob Hoffer was burt by the falling timbers and had an arm broken. Pitiable scenes ensued when the wives and children of the dead and wounded congregated while the bodies were being dug out. The boiler house was wrecked. Loss, $4,000. The mill will be idle for a few months. The cause of the explosion is not yet known. The boiler had just received a thorough over-

ATTEMPTED BRIBERY.

The Final Ruling in the Anarchist Case Turned Against Railway

Judge Gray's rulings of law in the case of the condemned anarchists, which sent them to the gallows, was turned to-day by Judge Kirk Hawes against several officials of the wealthiest corporations in the country at Chicago. The offence in the case was attempted jury bribing, and the main offe der City Railway, is sentenced to a term behind prison bars, which C. B. Holmes, president of the company, and C. M. Hardy, the company's attorney, are recommended to be dealt with by the Grand Jury.

Judge Hawes holds that the conspiracy rulings in the anarchist case apply as well to any other conspirators. In rendering his decision he sent Welch to jail for six months, and held that it was not necessary that Holmes or Hardy should have done any positive or affirmative act, or be present when it was done, if they in anyway aided or abetted, and that if they did so aid or abet, they were as guilty as the actual criminal. The question as to whether Holmes and Hardy actually did abet he left to the Grand Jury, recommending that body to in-

vs, the people."

The attempted bribery was in an insignificant little damage suit against the company, Welch approaching one of the jurors named Rosenthal during a court recess and endeavoring to retain by money his services in the interest of the company. Rosenthal indig-nantly refused, voted for the highest vertict against the corporation and afterward ex-posed the business to the attorneys for the plaintiff. Judge Hawes in his decision publicly thanked Rosenthal on behalf of the community. The sentence of Welch is only for his contempt of Court, and he with Hardy and Holmes are liable if their guilt is formally established before a jury in the regular way to a long term at bard labor in the Penitentiary.
