

THE TRIBUNE.

J. ABNER MARRELL, Editor.

THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1873.

SHAME, DOUBLE SHAME.

How shall we conceal our feelings, pregnant as they are with disapprobation of the conduct of Grant in his conciliatory letters to Messrs. Colfax and Ames? How could we, in taking even a temporary abode upon the soil of the half civilized Laplanders or beneath the parching suns of Ethiopia, have the brass to tell those people, the Government of the United States is an ornament and superior to theirs? Where can we find a spot upon this terra-queous globe, that we can stand upon and defend that man, who is nominally the chief Magistrate of this nation, who, not only harbors and winks at theft, but writes letters of approval and sympathy to the thieves? Where is his shame? Where is America's pride?

So far as having any thing to say concerning the fifteen hundred approvers of the conduct of Ames, at Eastop, or endorsers of Colfax, at South Bend, is a subject we cannot write upon, without exciting a smile of contempt. The bare mention of such, excites our most hidden feelings of disgust, and renders us wholly unfit for writing.

But we will say, and we think in terms too mild, that O. Ames and S. Colfax stand before the enlightened world, convicted of theft and felony against the United States.

ORPHANS OF NORTH CAROLINA.

The daughters and sons of N. C., have ever given an attentive ear, a pitying tongue, and helping hand, to her destitute and orphans. She is ready and willing to do so now, but there lies one danger in the way: procrastination or forgetfulness. But feel as we may, talk with the most soothing tongues to those who have applied their shoulders to the wheel, yet, if we keep back our aid, the orphans will not be benefited and the barthens is more heavily felt by those who have already commenced the good work of maintaining an Asylum. We refer to the Asylum now fitted up in Oxford, and our own county of Granville.

We feel like saying a great deal, to advance the cause of an Asylum in Oxford, and would say a great deal, but there is no way to embellish the expression—there are orphans in the land, and we are called upon by all sacred lovers of right to lend our aid to their maintenance.

Though we do not know much concerning the Asylum, in Oxford, having met none very active in the cause, but it serves our purpose to know, there is an effort to have one. Then in the name of the pride of the State of North Carolina—in the name of charity—in the name of every sacred law, we ask the newspaper men of the State, to make known this to the people, for knowledge is all they want, and we will build up an institution, which will be an ornament to any State, and be recognized at the thorne of God.

Allow us, (though not as a teacher,) but simply to suggest, that every Sabbath School Superintendent, try to get the parents of children interested in this, and let each little boy and girl have a little bank, of their own, to solicit contributions from each person they meet around home. Though five cents at a time, or even a cent, would make quite a large sum by the time thousands of those little amounts are put together. Why cannot all, send one quarter, if no more, and by the time one tenth of the people of the State, which is one hundred thousand, shall have sent one quarter, the Asylum will receive twenty-five thousand.

We will send our half dollar, will not others do the same. Again we urge, let us build up the Asylum at Oxford.

The President has subscribed $100 and Vice President Wilson $50 toward the Greeley monument.

EDUCATION AND WAKE FOREST.

We in to-day's issue give much of our space to a very well timed letter from JULE, (correspondent of the Daily News,) upon the subject of education. JULE himself is a fine educator, and a fair exponent of the cause he represents. Our pen and feelings echo in less euphonious language, the sentiments of his letter.

Messrs. Editors.—There is a mighty effort being made in our State to endow Wake Forest College. The amount required is the snug sum of one hundred thousand dollars. Since the death of Chapel Hill under Radical phrasing, the importance of having at least one college in the State placed upon a firm and stable footing, has become patent to every intelligent mind. The great wheel horse of this movement is Dr. Wingate, who is a man of indefatigable energy. Following in the footsteps of Peter the Hermit, in his attempt to rescue by a combined effort of chrisendom the Holy sepulchre from the Turks, he is preaching a crusade against the benighted hosts of ignorance. His clarion voice is ringing from the mountains to the sea shore, and many gallant knights have already enlisted beneath this banner. He has been elected generalissimo of the forces, and even now his recruiting sergeants are drumming for volunteers. We observe that one of his colonels has imitated the sublime policy of the great Corsican, and is endeavoring to form a reserved corps of young guards. It is well known that this body of youthful heroes swept the field of Borodino of bearded Russians, and so in all human probability will Colonel Pritchard with his division of little folks sweep to the rescue of us gray moustachios. —The State has been divided into departments, each department to furnish its quota of troops. It is a noble effort and deserves success. The ignorance of North Carolina is monstrous, alarming and increasing. A pall of Cimberian gloom is resting upon its intellectual horizon. She has drifted back into the torper of medievalism. The schoolmaster is now abroad, however, in the person of Wingate, who like another Alenin is able to do wonders upon a listed field of mental strife. There was an informal meeting of the commissioned officers in Murfreesboro, two nights ago, in which great unanimity prevailed as to the ways and means of raising this money. It is no private enterprise, but one of a most public character, and viewed aright becomes one of State importance. The religious press of the State is doing its utmost to advance this cause, and the secular press must assist, for in building up the educational interests of a country, it follows as a logical conclusion that it own will be best subserved. It is our colleges that furnish the brains that elaborate our editorials, and from their walls must come the future editors of our country. It is a Baptist enterprise but only nominally so, and cold must be that heart that will not respond to a cause so noble. It is no incipient move to crush Davidson or Trinity or to throw another handful of ashes over the buried corpse of our once noble University. We all love the grand old Alma Mater of our fathers, and had we the power we would drain the slimy pool that covers the place, where her shapely shafts and massive structure once stood. But every man of sense knows she is dead, and that it will require full half a century for her to assume her pristine rank among the Institutions of the country. It were mere folly to stand and shed tears of regret over the grave of the mighty Julius, when his son stands by with unsheathed and gleaming sword pointing us to victory. How much will the secular press of N. C. raise for this purpose? We call upon every newspaper in the State, that is desirous of seeing her valleys and hills, her mountains and plains radiant with the light of mind, to agitate this subject, to lay it before its readers, and in every way to foster and cherish it.

The ladies and children as well as the men have been appealed to, and now we appeal to the noble and unselfish press of our State to come to the rescue of Wake Forest.

JULE.
The will of the late Richard F. Sheppard, of Philadelphia, leaves $300,000 to his widow, which goes to her grandson, now four years old, at her death. In the event of the death of the grandson the estate is to be divided between the Northern and Southern Homes for Friendless children.

CORRESPONDENCE OF TRIBUNE.

K. TRELL'S, N. C., March 18, '73.
Editor Tribune.—We have but little news to write this week, though we have had pleasant weather for several days past. The farmers are all quite busy preparing for another crop, while the merchants and clerks have but little to do.

The foot ball game seems to be the order of the day, with both young and old, all participate from the four year old boys, up to our old bachelors. Old Granville county seems to be alive yet, as shown by a colored woman, near Oxford, a few days ago giving birth at one time, to three children, all are kicking and doing well, so says Drs. Chery and Smith. To show what a thrifty people ours are, there is a woman living within a few miles of this place, who is the mother of twenty-one living children. She also supports twelve dogs, and says she is the richest woman in Granville county.

The boys here were very much amused a few days ago at a fight between two colored women, they soon found that the old mode of warfare between women would not do, their hair being too short, they then resorted to stones, sticks, &c., until they had gotten such a distance apart that they could only use their tongues. None of our police officers were near to interfere.

Yours, &c. R.

CORRESPONDENCE OF TRIBUNE.

TALLY HO, N. C., March 15, '73.
EDITOR TRIBUNE.—Dear Sir.—The first issue of your paper, has fallen "back of Tar," somehow, and by accident gotten into my hands, and I see you say Oxford, Henderson, Williamsboro' and Sassafras Fork shall, from time to time, appear in your columns. Will you not allow your "back of Tar" neighbors also to have a hearing? I am sure Tally Ho deserves as much notice as Williamsboro' or Sassafras Fork. We raise finer tobacco, do more business, have more enterprising citizens, and above all smarter ladies (they dance for strong up here, not for looks.) And, "moreover gentlemen;" some of our farmers can raise corn and grass as high as your head (unless you are 7 feet 7 inches), on the same field, at the same time and with the same labor! Who can beat Tally Ho and vicinity?

But let me give you an introduction to our place. Well, first, it is on the Oxford and Hillsboro' road, 10 miles from the former and 26 from the latter. What is called Jeffreys' tract road, also runs through Tally Ho, so it is at the crossing of these roads. The boundary line is not well defined, as it is not incorporated, (but should be,) but we will take Messrs. Webb & Meadows' Store, as the central point, and say it extends half mile in all directions from said point. Here we have three stores. (And, hush, but perhaps they will advertise with you if they consult their interest) one grog shop, (alias devil's den,) kept by a colored man, a blacksmith shop, about a dozen dwellings, a tobacco Warehouse, and two schools and a Church.

All of our stores, are doing good business, attracting trade from miles around, each being of advantage to the other by making the place of that much more importance, and keeping up a lively, honest competition.

The oldest of these, Messrs. Webb & Meadows, are now enlarging their house for a new stock. Messrs. Hunt & Wright, occupy the factory formerly owned by J. L. Jones & Bro., which is sufficiently capacious, without enlargement. Mr. J. S. Bobbitt occupies J. L. Jones & Bro's old stand, is looking pleased and selling "navy-beans," etc. And if any of your "Granvillian" friends from your way should want a "hoes" shod in passing, our friend Lyon in the rear of Webb & Meadows, can give them a lift.

Our tobacco Warehouse, though not far advanced in age, is doing better than many of more mature age, there being no lack of buyers or sellers, and bids fair to excel, under the gentlemanly management of our enterprising citizens

Jno. H. Webb, Ed Fleming and E. L. Jones, under the firm of Webb & Fleming.

Here too, which I came near neglecting, is the horse of Tallyrand, so well known to the citizens of Granville and adjoining counties, as one the finest horses in the State. He is now in excellent condition and though 14 years old, is as nimble as a kitten, as docile as a dog, and as "gay as a lark."

If this meets with your favor, I will give other things of interest before long, and in the meantime send a few copies of your paper for distribution. Our county should support her paper. More anon.

Respectfully yours,
"BACK OF TAR."

THE SOUTHERN HOTEL.—This new and elegant hotel, in our sister town of Halifax, is now open for the accommodation of visitors. Mr. W. Hunter Harris, the lessee, is said to be an excellent caterer, and understands how to provide in all respects for the thorough comfort of his guests.—Enfield Times.

We were this morning shown a solid piece of gold, worth between $700 and $800, which is the product of the Gaston Mining Company, of North Carolina. This company is composed of Philadelphians who have invested a large amount of money in it, and, with the improved facilities for extracting the gold from the quartz, which they have at command, they expect by the 1st of July to produce per week from $5,000 to $6,000 worth of gold. It is well known that there are large gold deposits in North Carolina, but the difficulty hitherto has been to get the metal without paying more for than it will be worth. This difficulty has now been overcome, and the search for the precious metal promises to become an exceedingly lucrative business.—Philadelphia Telegram.

A YOUNG GIRL COMMITS SUICIDE.—A SAD OCCURRENCE.—It has rarely been our province to publish a sadder event than the one now chronicled.

On Monday morning last Miss Sallie Lawrence, daughter of Mr.

James J. Lawrence, deceased, was in fine health and apparently fine spirits. At night she was a corpse, having ended life by her own hand.

No particular reason is assigned for the terrible act, the facts of which might have remained a mystery, but for the reason that a memorandum was left by her disposing of some of her little effects to some of her family.

The victim of this unfortunate act was a young lady just entering upon womanhood; lovely, refined and a favorite among all her acquaintances. Surrounded by all that could make life pleasant in the future it is indeed wonderful that she could have made up her mind to end her life by her own hand.

The potion that worked such fatal effects was landanum and carbolic acid.—Tribune Southerner.
