Pike to Englishard.

The editor of the Standard thus replies to the Ku Klux proclamation of the organ of assassination in this city. The Wilmington Journal has a long and somewhat heated article in reply to the article entitled "Retribution," published in the Standard some two weeks ago.

We meant no such thing, and the Journal had no cause to form such an opinion. As all necessary information has been obtained, and we shall not interfere with the operations of any plans, we have no objection to state to what "power" we referred in the article entitled "Retribution."

We will now say, that we may be fully understood, that we shall never counsel, nor can we sympathize with, any proceedings outside the law of the land. If such as are committed we shall wish for the punishment of the guilty, let them belong to what party they may.

Fair and open political strife is one thing. Murder is another. And we could never sympathize with murderers, nor would we lift one finger to save them from the penalty of their crimes.

We have no sympathy with any secret political society, for we believe and know that, in a free country, they work evil to the people. We belong to no secret society—political or otherwise—and never shall.

A Wife chopped to Death—Suicide of her Husband.

ROUNDOUT, N. Y., October 24. A horrible tragedy was committed near this village last night. The actor in this terrible deed of blood was Joseph Wood, a ship carpenter by trade, and a man well known to be the slave of his passions.

Wood was twice married, and one of his wives survives him. For some time past he has been constantly receiving letters from an anonymous source. These letters which it is supposed, were sent by his first wife, were intended to create a feeling of interest in him toward the wife with whom he lived in Ponchoche, on the outskirts of this village.

A quarrel ensued, and a lady living in another part of the house had her attention attracted by the angry voices. Wood's wife expostulated and attempted to make an explanation, but her mad husband would listen to no entreaties.

The Faith of the Quakers.

The following Quaker declaration of faith was written by George Fox in 1671, and sent to the Governor of Barbadoes:

DECLARATION OF FAITH. We own and believe in God, the only wise, omnipotent and everlasting God, the Creator of all things in heaven and earth, and the Preserver of all that He hath made; who is God over all, blessed forever; to whom be all honor, glory, dominion, praise and thanksgiving, both now and forevermore! And we own and believe in Jesus Christ, His beloved and only begotten Son, in whom He is well pleased; and who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, and born of the Virgin Mary; in whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins; who is the express image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature; by whom were all things created that are in heaven and in earth, visible and invisible.

The great Presbyterian Union. The two great branches of the Presbyterian Church have virtually coalesced, and will hereafter be known as the Presbyterian Church of the United States.

Henry Ward Beecher spoke the other day at the commencement exercises of a business college in New York. We quote a passage on piety and piety: "I do not believe a business man who cannot get it has asked for employment and cannot get it."

Music at Midnight.

It is related of the saintly George Herbert, the quaint old English church poet, that once, in a walk to Salisbury to join a musical party, he saw a poor man and a poor horse that had fallen under the load. They were both in distress, and needed prompt help, which Mr. Herbert perceiving, put off his canonical coat and helped the poor man to unload his horse.

The New Orleans Picayune says: A number of our friends who have recently visited upper Red River give us the most glowing account of the condition of the crops in that section. They tell us of wide fields of cotton that gleam like snow in the sunshine of glorious autumn days, and of the merry songs of the harvesters, which are heard all the livelong day.

Empress Eugenie at Magenta.

A letter from Italy relates this little anecdote of the Empress Eugenie, on her way to the East:

When Eugenie's train passed Magenta, the battle-field was lighted up with Bengal lights, and the huge grave where the French were buried was thrown into bold relief. The Empress ordered the train to be stopped. Walking amid a tolerably large gathering of villagers, who saluted her as she passed, she approached one of the smaller graves, marked by a single cross, and placed some flowers upon it—flowers which she had plucked from a mound hard by.

Who has not heard of Niobe, Queen of Thebes (whom Shakespeare represents as "all tears"), and how terrible her affliction? Niobe had seven sons and seven daughters, of whom she was extravagantly fond. She never would allow them to slide on the cellar door with the neighbors' children, nor any other low place.

The goddess whose worship was thus interrupted was indignant. She would not have it. She dwelt on the Cynthus mountain top, and calling on some of the gods who lived near neighbors to her, related her grievances and asked them to avenge her. They consented and carried quick destruction into the Niobe family.

Plod and Pluck.

At a revival excitement in Connecticut, a respectable old lady was struck with conviction and became a convert, and was proposed for membership of the church. There was a meeting held for the examination of the candidates, of whom there were several in attendance.

A TUBULAR BOILER, forty horse power. Equipped of the underwood. JOSEPH C. GIBSON, Oct 24, 1899.

That Proclamation.

There have been about as many opinions expressed about the late proclamation of the Governor, as there are people who read the papers, some condemn it, many applaud it. There are some so bigoted that they will know nothing good about the present administration in the State, and therefore condemn everything at wholesale.

This is foolish. No candid and honest minded man can say that the proclamation is not an honest statement of facts. There is no heralding forth of the Ku Klux, however much they may deserve it, there is no condemning a particular class. It serves all alike. It is for the protection of the people, and as such the people ought to sustain the Governor in trying to carry out the laws.
