INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 30.-The Hon. R. W. The speaker gave the money question a searching

He said he would confine himself to the discussion of the financial question, considering that the most important now demanding public attention, and mind. He may take a bank note for the amount, but it is only because he accepts the promise of the bank to pay in coin. If he had not confidence in dered the issue so distinctly made that it could not be eyaded. But two plans of currency are proposed in direct opposition to each other. One, a paper circulation, redeemable at par in coin at the pleasure of the holder, and limited by the necessities of the trade and commerce. The other, a paper circulation, limited only by the discretion of Congress, having no relation to specie value, and not redeemable in anything. He does not believe that the demogratic party throughout the United Stays favor an irredeemable currency, for in the last national platform of the party it severely censured the Republican party for delaying the resumption of specie payment but in the state of Indiana it is so committed that it cannot that it could not be eyaded. But two that bank would not so pay; he would refuse the bill. It is so with the would refuse the bill. It is so with the greenback. If there was not confidence in the ability of the government to pay it in coin it would not circulate. The Democratic party shook this confidence so much in 1864, by declaring that the war was a failure and demanding that it cease, that a greenback dollar was only worth thirty eight cents, and now under Republican management, it has gone up to par and is accepted as the representative of a dollar in gold or silver, because it can be exchanged for either. It is the belief that this change can be made that gives itscredit. If it was known that it could not be made it would not circulate.—The government has made it a legal tender in the payment of debts, and a creditor may be compelled to take it from a debtor for the purpose, but there the compulsion ends. The government has no power to require that it shall be received for property or anything clas, and nobody will receive it except at its representative value. That is the relation it bears to coin. A dollar has a fixed value universally accepted. We call our legal tender silver coin of 4121 grains a dollar, but suppose we should not the coil of 2001 grains and call greenback. If there was not confidiana it is so committed that it cannot support its present ticket without expressly approving an unlimited issue of irredeemable currency. On this point the Indiana democracy, and nationals, therefore, whenever in particular localities they can secure a prospect of suc-cess by uniting, they fall into each others arms as gracefully as if they were dancing the round dance. Upon one point only is their difference so great as to cause any impediment to
