SMITHVILLE, N. C., July 31, 1879. EDITOR POST:—A somewhat peculiar way to enforce the stringent quaratine regulations of the port of Wilmington, has been extrioned in the last few weeks, and were especially in the last few days, -as evidenced by the following incidents which have occurred: Capt. Boyde was not allowed to enter the city of Wilmington, eyen in person to transact the legitimate business with his consul, but was allowed the utmost freedom at Smithville, ashore with his crew, and could associate with all and meet those who desired, from Wilmington; then parties could return to the deserters from an American schooner from the south, which was laying out-Mr. Penton and vessel was ordered back into quarantine at Deep water point for thirty days-for this causenevertheless this man who claimed to be be the Captain of the schooner went to Wilmington and shipped a new crew.
