DUTY OF THE NEXT LEGIS-LATURE.

The Le islature which convienes January rext. should at once appoint an investigating or mmattee, and have the whole matter of the lease of the Western N. C. Rail: oad thoroughly investigated. It is believed that Mr. less paid for the lease to parties who should have been acting for the intrest of the state instead of working for Mr. Best. Some one got mency, and if a spenal committee will do igs full duty the carrept rassals will be shown up in their true light. We hope this matter will not be over-looked. This gentleman resigned the position of Judge of the Superior Court and accepted the nomination of his party for Governor. He carried the state by a very handsome majority, but the rascality of the Democrats has counted in Goy. But we had rather be in Judge Buxton's position, honored and respected out of transaction and the special tax bond business. HON. ORLANDO HUBBS.

Hon Or ando Hubbs, the Member of Congress elect, for the Second North Carolina District, came to North Carolina in 1365. He went very extensive ly into the grocery business with his brother, E. Hubbs. In 1868 Mr. O. Hubbs was elected sheriff of Craven county, which position he has filled every sence with credit to himself and to the perfect satisfaction of the business men of Newbern, as was shown by the number who voted for him for Congress on the 2ad of November. Mr. O. Hebbs is very popular with all who know him. The Rev. Dr. Closs says he voted for him, because he knew him to be an honest man." And that is the unanimous opinion of all the good people who know him, and we believe that he will represent the people of his district with integrity and ability. So far as the bad people are concerned, he need not want their commendation.

DEMOCRATIC POLE.

Garfield defeated Hancock on the 2nd of November, but we had no idea that the Democrat'c party would be so soon sold out, But while walking up the street on yesterday, we saw a colored man cutting up the Democratis pole, and he said he was doing it by order of exhaustion, and who feel that they are the Democratic party. We are not surprised at it, from the fact, that they know that they never will have any more use for a pole.

Comptroller, in the Matter of the Government Printing office Mes ger's Case. 1. The Government is but liable for the torts of its officers or agents. 2. Hence, when a messenger, employ Government Printing Office, by his wrongful acts caused the death of a horse hired for the public service, the

3. The agent is personally liable for his tert to the owner of the horse. In 1879 the Superintendent of the Government Printing Office, in pursuance of authority conferred upon ham by act of Congress, hired a horse from a resident of the District of Columbia for a compensation agreed week, upon, to be used by a messenger of the office. The messenger wrongfully maltreated the horse, by reason of which he died. The question is now submitted by the Superintendent of the Covernment Printing Office to the First Comptroller, to determine whether the owner of the horse can be paid the reasonable value thereof out of moneys appropriated for the general purposes of the Government Printing Office.

Decision by William Lawrence,

First Comptroller: The messenger whose wrongful acts caused the death of the horse is clearly liable so the owner thereof for his value, but the Government is not responsible for the tort or wrongfu! acts of its officers or agents. This has been repeatedly determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The exemption of the Government from liability rests upon the well settled principle that a wrong cannot be imputed to it. This principle is derived from the English common law and is equally applicable in this country as in Great Britain. It is a rule of public policy, and its maintenance is indispensable to secure the public interests. If the Government could be held responsible for the torts of its officers it would be involved in many liabilities, and cittzens would, in many cases, feel relieved of the obligation to aid in preventing or detecting wrongful acts of others or agents. If the Government should be held liable for torts of this character. the result would be, frequently to invite their commission which might be made to inure to the benefit of parties making claims against the Government.

It is said in Broom's Legal Maxims. "The ordinary maxim, Respondent superior, has, then, no application to the Crown, for the Crown cannot, in contemplation of the law, command a wrougful act to be done. It may be stated, moreover, as a rule of the common law, that the Crown cannot be prejudiced by the laches or acts of
