Tom Jarvis, the fraud who, by eascatity, bulldozing, ballot-box stuffing and other parallel games got to be Governor, is now figuring to be Senator in place of Matthew W. Ransom. If it was not for the damage to the state we should greatly rejoice from the fact that the elevation of such a man as Jarvis over so able and faithful a Senator as M. W. Rausom; would greatly benefit the Republican party. Rausom has many friends in the Senate, thereby enabling him to get legislation beneficial to the people which makes him strong with the masses; and adds to the strength of his party. In a party sense we should be glad to see Jarvis successful over Rausom, but the disgrace would be fearful for even North Carolina to

Samuel Northrop.

All these gentlemen are fair minded and good men, with one single exception, that of W. L. Smith, of the 2nd ward. He was chairman of the board of commissioners last summer which controlled the elections, and to him more than any other man is due the tact that the Republicans failed to get 1,050 of their votes polled in this city. Mr Smith is very bitter in his politicsmost too much so for a presiding officer. He has taken the nomination for Alderman for the purpose of being Mayor, and should he be Mayor we are confident that he could not decide impartially between a Democrat and a Republican. Therefore if we must have a Democrat, we hope to have one who can act impartially between all parties. Mr. Smith said two weeks before the election, last summer, that all the voters in the First and Fifth Wards in this city could not be cast. HOAR'S SPEECH,

Mr. Hoar, Mr. President, I had no intention of taking part in this debate, and I do not now propose to detain the Senate for any length of time. But l - Tactics, committed suicide in San think it due to myself, I think it due to the character of the Senate, I think was in his day eminent as a military it due to American manhood to express my emphatic indignation at the exhibition which the Senator from Georgia has made so degrading as it seems to That is the only difference between him me to the character of this body. It is and Senator from Illinois, whom his the first time in the political history neighbor from Georgia so much adthe Bank of England and other im- of this country that a Senator has risen in his place and undertaken in advance of the act to deliver a lecture to thinks right, and the Senator at Washhis peer and to inform him that if he should do what is deiired by one-half of the members of this body, he will do an act which he proceeds to pronounce degrading and treacherous.

It is none of the business of the Sena tor from Georgia how any other Senator in this body shall cast his vote Each of us is responsible to his country to his State, to his conscience, to his God, and in whatever part of this Republic we may dwell no slavemaster or gave it the other day. plantation overseer is to wave his whip over the heads of American Senators. Applause in the galleries. | Every utterance that came from the lips of the Senator from Georgia was an insult to the representatives of the American people who sit in these seats. The Senator no more understands what is due to the honor of an honorable man to-day than when chosen as a Union man to a State convention, he cast the vote which carried that State into the rebellion. He has learned nothing either of consistency, of constitutional duty, of propriety, of personal behavior, or what constitutes true manhood, from that day to this. The Senator's speech was degrading with the Democrats and the wicked also by reason of the petty degrading test which he applies to the conduct of Senators. The question whether a Senator's vote will in the judgment of the individual Senator 'advance the interests of the country, whether it will advance the interest of the State be represents, has not been mooted in the two or three-elaborate harangues we have heard from the lips of the Senator from Georgia. What he owes to this or that party, whether Democratic or Republican votes were counted when he was declared elected to his seat, whether his vote is to advance the interests of this or that party, seems to be the consideration which arises in the mind of the Senator from Georgia.

Why, he has undertaken to draw a comparison between the position of my honorable friend from Illinois and that of the new Senator from Virginia, who had just taken his seat. With much honeved commendation he compares the honorable Senator from Illinais to the sages and saints of the early and better days of the Republic. The Senator from Georgia was lost in admiration of the virture and the consistency and the fidelity of his esteemed neighpor, the Senator from Illinois; and why? The Senator from Itlinois, having been elected four years ago by the Legislature of a State which had an average Republican majority of from 50,000 to 100,000, having been chosen by a Legielature containing a Republican majority, but owing his election to the voters partly of Democrats and partly of Republicans, according to my honorable friend from Georgia-

Mr. Davis, of Illipois. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him.

Mr. Hoar, Certainly. Mr. Davis, of Illinois. The Senator certainly did not listen to my speech

Mr. Hill, of Georgia.

Mr. Davis, of Illinois Just wait a moment. The fact is all I want to the party to which he belongs will try state. The fact is the Republicans were not in the majority in the Legislature; that I stated; they were numerically in the plurality. The independents of that body and the Democrats elected me to the Senate.

> Mr. Hoar. The independents were Republicans, were they not?

> Mr. Dayis, of Illinois. Some of them were Democrats and some of them were Republicans, but like me they had gone into the liberal movement of Mr. Hoar. But the people of Illi-nois now and ever since have been largely Republican. I am not criticising the position of my honorable friend from Illinois. I should deem it unworthy of me as a gentleman, saying nothing of my position as a Senator, to undertake to suggest that anything but his own conscience and his own sense of duty was to give the law. to him in casting the vote which he has to give. But when the Senator from Illinois was elected from a State containing ordinarly a large majority of Republicans, because there was an accidental majority of Democrats and and independent Republicans in that State, he'throught it his duty to cast his vote for the Democratic organization of the Senate, although, as he informs us, it was Repugnant alike to his taste and his judgment in many particulars. The Senator from Virginia owes his seat to a State which casts 84,000 Republican votes and $4,000 Independent Democratic or Readjuster votes. making 118,000, and only 96,000 votes representing the Bourbon or regular Democracy He votes, if he does vote, for an organization which commends itself to his taste and his judgment .mires. Is the Senator a traitor who represents 22,000 majority of the people of his own state in voting as he ington who represents a minority of the people of this state in voting as he thinks wrong? That is the logic of the honorable Senator from Georgia.

Mr. Davis, of Illinois, I will say to the Senator that the Democrats and Independents elected me to the Senate. I chose to be elected by them, and accepted the office from them. Because the Democrats were largely in the maority they had a right at any rate to suppose that I would not turn the Democratic organization cut of power in this Senate. That is the reason, and I

Mr. Hoar. The Senator from Illinois would not turn a dog out of power under those circumstances, and nobody supposes he would. I am not criticis ing him, I repeat.

Mr. Davis, of Illicois. Then why keep carping, it you are not criticising? Mr. Hoar. My friend from Illinois missed the delightful pleasure of hearing his own eulogy pronounced by the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. Davis, of Illinois. I was not in Mr. Hoar. He was not in the Champer, and so migsed the chance of knowing in his lifetime, what none of the rest of us will know until we die, what the Senator from Georgia thinks of us. and I am responding to the speech in which the honorable Senator from Georgia drew a parallel between the virtuous Senator from Illinois who votes Senator from Virginia who he fears will vote with the Republicans; and

But, Mr. President, there is something deeper; there is something certain ly deeper in this country than a party name or a party attachment or a party affiliation. The Senator from Virginia, in his elequent speech, told us in a very significant utterance of a Democratic party in the south that put one thing into its platform and exacted quite another thing in its political conduct. -He told us of a Democratic party in Virginia, under whatever name they choose to be called, who mean at least that if Democracy triumphs in this country in future it shall triumph in a fair field, and who believe that deeper than Democracy is the right of every American citizen to cast his vote as he pleases, and to have that vote honestly counted as it is cast, There are Democrats in the south who mean in future to overcome their political antagonists by reasoning with them and not by cheating them; there are Democrats in the south who mean, if they can, to vote down the men with whom they differ, but who do not mean to assassi nate them; and if there be such Democrats, their place is with the Kepublican party until that result is accomplished. There are Democrats in the south who mean in the language of one of the most eloquent utterances I have lately beard from human lips, "to live in a nation and not in an aggregation of petty provinces" any longer. There are Democrats in the south who do not mean to live any longer in the gragevards and among the tombs, whose face is towards the morning and upon whose brow the rising sunlight of the future glory of this country is already beginning to be visible. To such Democrats, if the advance courier of their column has at length reached the Senate Chamber, after long waiting and yearning, the Republicans of the north desire to stretch forth a friendly It is for no purpose of petty bargain or barter, it is inspired by no miserable ambition for office or political victory; but it is in the spirit of that patriotism which loves the south as much as it loves the north, it is in the spirit of a the bargain:

ORGANIZATION OF THE SEN-ATE.

When the Senate met on Friday Mr. Pendleton called up the organiza tion resolution. Mr. Anthony moved to Dr. Bailhache, Marie Surgeon, h that it be indefinitly postponed. On this question Davis of Illinois voted with the Democrats, and Mahone at first voted the same way, but changed his vote so that the Senate became a tie, and the Vice-President voted, aye.
