

The Rebels Denouncing their Friends in Europe.

[From the Richmond Dispatch, March 18.] The altered tone of both the English and Yankee newspapers, when they speak of each other's respective countries, is the most remarkable incident connected with journalism in these latter days.

At the same time the Yankee press was conspicuous and cringing as the British press was arrogant and domineering. Both are wonderfully altered since that time.

We sometimes feel disposed to be a little astonished at the facility with which Great Britain has been brought to play second fiddle in this concert of the nations.

Who that lived a century or even half a century ago would have believed it possible that such a thing could have happened?

Testimonials to the Officers and Crew of the Merrimack.

We noticed some time since the efforts of the merchants, underwriters and others of New York to raise a sum of money to give to the gallant officers and crew of the corvette Kearsarge, as a slight recognition of their valuable services to the country, and especially to the merchant marine by sinking the Rebel pirate Alabama last year.

Table listing names and amounts for Merrimack crew: Commander $10,000, Lieutenant Commanded 1,200, Chief Engineer 800, Surgeon 800, Paymaster 600, etc.

Amount apportioned $25,000 Total officers and crew 161 N. Y. Herald.

The Richmond Press on Jeff. Davis' Message [From the Petersburg Express, March 16.] Such of the Richmond press as comment upon the message of the President, a full sym-nopsis of which we published yesterday, do so in approving terms.

The Whig thinks it should not have been made public, but since it has been given to the world, urges upon Congress and the people to hearken to its suggestions.

The Sentinel thinks the expositions made by the message will powerfully affect both Congress and the country. The imminence of a great peril will arouse and command an anxious attention, while the assurance that it is in our ability to avert it, and the indication of the means of doing so will animate to prompt, energetic and hopeful action.

The Sentinel trusts that the recommendations of the message will be at once complied with, and in all their extent. The responsibility is now with Congress. The President has done his duty in the matter. He has pointed out the feehore, and summoned all the energies of the crew. It is for Congress to say whether the measures necessary to save the ship shall be adopted and sanctioned, or whether she shall be allowed to drive to her fate.

The Dispatch says whatever Congress may intend to do in the premises, it trusts they will do at once. This is no time for deliberation, when the enemy are actually thundering at the gates of the capitol. The moments lost in speech-making may prove of the last importance for weal or woe to the confederacy.

Prompt action is now what is required—prompt action and nothing more. Above all things, however, the Dispatch unites with the President in his appeal for unanimity. Let us not now, in the fourth year of this desperate struggle, exhibit the spectacle of those European States on the Continent, who, while everything on earth they held dear was at stake, could not, in the very presence of the enemy, restrain their senseless quarrels long enough to prevent him from taking advantage of them to their common destruction.

It requires all our united strength to ward off the danger; and if the least particle of all be wanting we are lost. It would be to the country the most welcome of all intelligence that harmony existed between all parts of the government, State and Confederate, and that all were uniting for the benefit of all.

The Enquirer says the message is one of great earnestness, and that it plainly and emphatically explains to the Congress and the country the extreme perils which beset our cause, while there is truth and candor in the statement of our dangers, there is no evidence of want of faith in our ultimate success.

A DAILY NEWSPAPER.

Will be printed every morning. (Sundays excepted) at the Herald Buildings, Front St., Wilmington, N. C.

The Herald of the Union.

Will be devoted mainly to the publication of the Current News of the day, Military, Political, and Civil. Arrangements are making, and in a measure perfected, that will give to this Journal UNSURPASSED FACILITIES, for obtaining the latest and most reliable intelligence of all current events: An efficient and reliable CORPS OF CORRESPONDENTS. Has been engaged at Fortress Monroe, Washington, New York and elsewhere, from whom we look for frequent dispatches, covering all stirring events of interest, thus enabling us to lay the news before our readers frequently several days in advance of Northern papers. Particular attention will be paid to the MARKET REPORTS, Of the great commercial centres of the country, whereby we hope to make this journal valuable to both producer and consumer, and a reliable guide to all engaged in commercial pursuits. Careful attention will be given to the LITERARY DEPARTMENT, Which will be enriched with selections in Prose and Poetry, from the pens of the ablest American and Foreign writers. In a word, no pains or expense will be spared to make THE HERALD OF THE UNION a welcome visitant in every Camp, Counting room, and Fire-side in the country; ADVERTISERS, Will find THE HERALD OF THE UNION a valuable medium of communicating with the public. We start out with a circulation equal the utmost hitherto attained by any newspaper in North Carolina, and we shall not relax our efforts, until we have established a circulation unrivalled by any Journal in the land. As we are favored by the patronage of the public, so we can in proportion favor the public. OUR SIZE At present the same as that of the papers hitherto printed in Wilmington, will be enlarged so soon as we can procure the necessary material and paper from the North. JOB WORK. We are now prepared to respond to the calls of the public in the execution of Job Printing in all its various branches, including, Bill-heads, Circulars, Hand-Bills, Posters, Cards, Envelopes, Pamphlets, Blanks, Military Orders, etc., etc., etc.
