The Fate of Maximilian. Maximilian has been shot by order of the Mexican Government. What shall we say of the justice or injustice of this act? Ever and everywhere, we are opposed to capital punishment, whether for high crimes or low, whether upon small offenders or great. We hold with Jeremy Bentham that "the worst use you can put a man to is to hang him."

But, meanwhile, it is a solemn fact that the death-penalty, either by hanging or by shooting, is the common mode, practiced by the civilized world, of punishing the perpetrators of capital crimes. The death-penalty is the prevailing law in the United States and in Mexico. This being the case, on what criminals shall this law be executed? Shall obscure culprits taste the bitterness of a bitter fate, and illustrious offenders go free? Shall a great nation, in meting out the punishment of death, say to the world, "The murderer of a man shall be hung; but the assassin of a nation shall be pardoned?"

The two greatest criminals of the nineteenth century have been Jefferson Davis and Maximilian. The one was guilty of treason against his own country; the other, of usurpation over an alien people. If it is ever justifiable to punish any criminal with death, the American Government ought to have executed Jefferson Davis, as the Mexican Government has executed Maximilian. The only vindication possible to the American Government for its release of Jefferson Davis is a consistent policy by the Government, in future, of non-punishment of any and all criminals by death.

This ambitious foreigner was no doubt an accomplished and amiable gentleman; but he was not shot for being a gentleman; he was shot for being a brigand, a filibuster, a pirate, a usurper, a despot. He was an alien who entered Mexico with an invading army, and sought therewith to overturn the Mexican republic, and on its ruins to erect an empire.

The crack of the twelve rifles which uttered this Austrian's death-warrant, and which we hope has forever put an end to "the divine right of kings" on this continent, is a needful proclamation to the Old World that crowned heads are intruders on North American soil; and that foreign bayonets, pointed against a North American people, shall be thrust back into the bosoms of those who bear them thither.

The Koran does not permit the Commander of the Faithful to leave his own dominions. It is his duty to conquer the world and make it all Mohammedan, and Europe has seen the Moslem armies on the soil of France on one side, and at the gates of Vienna on the other, and but for Martel and Sobieski, Paris might have been ruled by a Moslem Viceroy. But most things in this world can be managed, and to allow the Sultan to come to Paris, it was only necessary to decree the annexation of France, pro tem, to the Ottoman Empire, and then, when the Sultan has finished his visit, it will be given back again to Napoleon III. by the grace of God and the will of the French people, its rightful owner.

Why Young Men do not Marry. Rev. Robert Coffey, the eloquent Unitarian clergyman, recently preached a sermon in Chicago on "Our Daily Bread," in the course of which he discussed social questions, and explained why young men do not marry: When one said lately in the presence of a frank, outspoken young woman in this city, that the reason why young men did not marry was that their wives would not be content to begin to live in a homely fashion, after they had been raised in luxury, she replied, "the woman is quite as willing as the man to do that, and I know of no woman in the circle of my acquaintance who would not be content, for the sake of the man she loved, to cast her lot with him and make his interest in every way her own."

The original generation were honest, hardworking laborers, but having no money wherewith to buy stores, the second generation were degraded into what is now called "piny woods poor white trash." Mrs. Johnson, his mother, was a woman of rare ability for one of her class, and through her influence Jacob Johnson, his father, was induced to obtain labor in the city of Raleigh, and when he died she apprenticed her son, Andrew, then about thirteen years old, to a merchant tailor named James Selby.

Our national product of bullion is now about $100,000,000 per annum—$20,000,000 from placer or gulch gold diggings, and $80,000,000 from quartz mining. Of the quartz product, about three-fourths is from gold bearing lodes, and one-fourth from silver mines. In the production of gold California takes the lead, yielding about $50,000,000. In silver mining, which is never done by hand-washing, but solely through the quarrying and reduction of quartz, Nevada is foremost, yielding $16,000,000 per annum.

A frightful accident recently occurred at Tola, an Austrian seaport on the Adriatic, in experimenting with nitro-glycerine for military purposes. The first shell, filled with this substance, burst in the gun, destroying it, and blowing to pieces two men who were loading it. It also frightfully disfigured the face of the corvette captain, Count von Kielmanssegge, fractured the leg of a captain, and rendered the colonel and another official deaf.

A singular incident occurred in the Park Moreau, Paris. On a vacant lot of ground in the neighborhood grew a large acacia, at present in full blossom. A workman, wishing to borrow a branch to plant in his own plot of ground, climbed the tree, with a saw, selected his branch and commenced to sever it from the trunk. But before he had had time to make a stroke, he fell to the ground, insensible, overpowered by the carbonic acid disengaged from the flowers. He was carried to the hospital in a condition of asphyxia.

At the recent Masonic celebration in Winchester, Virginia, the apron worn by the orator, William H. Travers, formerly belonged to General George Washington, and was presented to him by General Lafayette, and has beautifully wrought on it in silver and gold the flags of France and the United States combined, and forms by their combination the principle masonic emblems.

The Arabs visited the Tribune press rooms and offices on Wednesday. Their proposition to stand on their hands and let the hollows of their feet be used as inkstands for the rest of the day, was declined with thanks. Having ascended to the topmost floor, they gravely nodded their turbans and departed for other climes.

Forty thousand wax candles are lighted instantaneously by a single match at the Royal Palace in Berlin. The wicks are previously connected by a thread spun from gun cotton, on lighting one end of which all the candles are lighted simultaneously, and thus the whole of the seven hundred apartments of the palace are illuminated at once.

Early Life of President Andrew Johnson. The Raleigh (N. C.) correspondent of the N. O. Republican says: Andrew Johnson was born in the upper story of a kitchen attached to a building known as "Casso's Tavern," of which his mother was the housekeeper or stewardess. A daughter of Mr. Casso, the proprietor of the hotel, was married to a merchant named Stewart in the early part of the evening, and the dance in honor of the wedding was progressing at the time he first saw light.

The Marquis of Bute has purchased Loudon Castle, in Ayrshire, the seat of the Marquis of Hastings, for $1,735,000. Losses at the last Derby races compelled the Marquis of Hastings to sell. The United States has 486 cheese factories.

Special Notices. This is truly the "Age of Progress," and the American people are, beyond doubt, far ahead of all others. This is clearly demonstrated by the Sewing Machine—which is, strictly speaking, an American invention.
