Pushing the Financial Question.

Mr. Edward Atkinson, of Boston, is "pushing" the financial question with an ability and vigor that must be rather distressing to Mr. Heratio Seymour, who urges his friends to push it in a very different direction. Mr. Atkinson has been studying documents accessible to every body, but by no means manageable by every body—such as reports of Secretaries of the Treasury—and has reached some very striking results.

For instance: The total revenue of the United States from April 1, 1861. to June 30, 1868, seven and a quarter years of active war or of so called peace, was $2,213,349,486. If we deduct from the total expenditure for that time a fair allowance for ordinary peace expenses, we have, say. $4,000,000,000 as the actual cost of the war. But as we owed on the 30th of June, 1868, only $2,485,000,000, it follows that we have actually raised by taxation, and paid toward the cost of the war, besides, paypaid toward the cost of the war, besides pay ing all our peace expenses, $1,515,000,000.— This has been paid in seven and a quarter years, and amounts to three-eighths of the entire cost of the war. And the money has been raised mainly in the loyal States, which for more than half of the time had a most efficient producing part of the population engaged in Again, as a taxation of nearly $500,000,000 has proved too great for our present condition, the taxes have been reduced to but little more than $300,000,000 a year—and such is the reducing of our expenses that this sum is ample to pay expenses and interest, and a moderate annual payment of the principal. The normal increase of the population will so enhance the revenue that the rate per capita, which lany improvements meet the eye in differlany improvements meet the eye The whisky and tobacco, stamp and other taxes will yield more than $180,000,000.

This is the way to push the financial question-to tell the truth about it. To show that although the rebellion of the Southern wing of the Democratic party, sustained by the opposition offered to the Government by Mr. Seymour and his friends, has thrown a great debt upon the country, yet the energy and industry which conquered the rebellion will, with equal determination, casily pay the honest cost of the incalculably precious victory.—Harper's

OBITUARY.

DIED, after a lingering sickness, on the morning of Thursday, Thomas S. Duffy, son of Dr. Walter, aged 13 years, years 9 months and 12 days.

Seldom have we known a child possessed of such noble and manly principles as our little friend. His manners were so affable, and his demeanor so polite as to endear and attach him to all his playmates and acquaintances. Truly, it may be said of him, "None knew him but to love him."

God has taken him to dwell above. There is sadness and grief in the family circle, but there is consolation in this bitter cup of affliction,-"Tommy"has ended his race, and early reached the

He had a full understanding of the way of salvation, and often expressed himself as anxious to go home, "home to Jesus." "I want to go home," he said to his pastor. "You are home now Tommy," was his reply. "I mean, home 1868
