THE CITY.—The city has relapsed into its customary turbulence, for the change from Tuesday, election day, is indeed marked.—Business was, on that day, to a certain extent suspended, and together with the unusual quiet attending the voting, gave the city an air of quietness, similar to Sunday—no noise, no excitement,—nothing to denote the great struggle that was going on, save an occasional knot of citizens around the polling places, and the line of voters awaiting to deposit their precious charge. But yesterday the streets resumed their wonted bustle, and business became renewed.

In walking the streets, the political feeling or opinion of our citizens can readily be observed, from the appearance of their countenances. Those of Republicans, wearing a joyous, grateful look, that of the Democrats a contrary one. It is amusing, however, to notice upon what little comfort the Democrats solace themselves. One meets another on the street and exclaims, "Did you see Kentucky and New York?" receiving an affirmative answer, they pass on, no tearing to enter into further detail.

The election of Grant and Colfax, and our own gallant standard-bearer, Hon. David Heaton, is accomplished fact. Let this suffice. Let all proceed to their usual vocations, and endeavor by every possible means to assist the great Republican party and its gallant leader, General Grant, in building up our whole country, and make this particular part of it, the old North State, what it should be, one of the foremost States in the Union.

Now that we are victorious in the great battle just fought, we can afford to be generous and treat our political opponents with courtesy and gentleness.
