TURNER'S NORTH CAROLINA ALMANAC FOR 1876.—In a former issue we made mention of the publication of this Almanac by James H. Enniss, Bookseller of this city. A more careful looking over its pages entitles it to a more extended notice. It has been enlarged to sixty-four pages and is full of valuable State and statistical and other interesting matter. We would now call attention to its annual State record department, an entirely new feature, which gives an account of the most important events which have transpired in the State during 1874-'5, and which also embraces the chronology and necrology of the same period. Next, there is a Legislative summary of the most important public acts passed by the last General Assembly, among which will be found some laws which are of special interest to the farmers, and which they ought to THE FAIR.-The crowd has left know. Then, there is an account of the minerals discovered in our pearance. Everything went off as State during the past year, with usual, and we heard of nothing to some account of the working of the mar the occasion. We learn that copper mines in the western counthe exhibition was about as good as ties. But that which will most inexpected, and the receipts probably | terest that large class, the farmers, as much as anticipated. Every- is the farmers' department, which buly seemed to be well pleased gives an account of extra crops of with what they saw and heard. Of corn, cotton, tobacco, &c., now in the general management of affairs our State, also, of some large hogs, we have heard no complaint. This, their weight, by whom raised, &c., which shows what can be done in the Old North State when the right men are at it.
