THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1878.

Bertie County Republican Mass Meeting.

To the Editor of The Constitution: On Saturday, the 17th day of June, 1576, there will be a meeting of the Republicans of Bertie County, at Windsor, in the Court-house for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held in Raleigh on the 12th of July, 1876, and also to the Congressional Convention to be held in Edenton, Chowan county on the 22d of June. 1576, and to transact such other business as may come before the Convention for the good, and for the advancement of the Republican party. All Republicans are respecfully invited to attend.

The Daily News in a late issue says that the moral as well as the material welfare of the nation rerequires the ascendency of its party.

Well, now, we don't know so well about that, certainly so far as North Carolina is concerned. We do know that the Democratic party has one State officer only, and we do know that he is a confessed defaulter to the tune of about two thousand five hundred dollars. Now, upon the simple rule of three this morality proposition would well rather badly for the people. There are seven State officers, including Lieut. Governor, to be elected this year, and, if one Democratic officer steals two thousand five hundred dol lars on a little outside transaction what would the crowd steal counting in the State Treasurer? We don't believe there would be hardly anything left of the capitol roof at the end of four years. So far as morality in its strictest meaning is concerned, we will turn the problem over to Bonitz of the Messenger for consideration.

But while Judge Settle would bel complimented by any vote that might be cast for him in the the national Convention, and while he could not refuse a nomination for the Vice Presidency if tendered him, yet he deems such a result as not at all likely to occur, and, on grounds of policy, he believes, with the great body of our Southern friends, that neither of the candidates should be selected from the South. The Democrats will not isk a Southern nomination, and there is no binding reason why the Republicans should incur the risk. We must lay aside every weight, no matter how apparently light, in order to win this race. In fine, while Southern Republicans acknowledge no inferiority to their Northern brethren, and feel they could trust themselves, and deserve to be trusted with the administration of the government, yet they prefer, on grounds of policy, and from their profound anxiety to say corruption among its officials in the nothing and to do nothing which lection of the ticket to their Northhint that the taint of malfeasance ern, Eastern and Western friends, The Southern Republicans are not disposed to ask for anything at this crisis which might be calculated to put in the jeopardy to the slightest being detained in Washington. extent the great National cause. They will have a right to expect, however, after the victory shall have been won, that their claims shall be considered in connection with the Cabinet, the Supreme Court bench, and the diplomatic service, in regard to which they feel they have not thus far had full justice. But meanwhile our motto should be, "Every thing for the cause; nothing for sections or for men." We must defeat the Democracy at all hazards, and thus perpetuate the government which Washington established, and which people have preserved.

A close observer of political events will hardly fail to admit that a most imminent crisis in the history of the country is at hand. It is, one too, involving not only the secondary questions of who shall preside over the Nation as chief magis rate for the ensuing four years, or which of the two great political parties of the country shall control its destiny for a stated period, but, it is a question, which, in our opinion, will settle if not forever, certainly for many years, the very character of the government itself. In short, one of the main questions to be decided the present year is, and decisive one.

whether we shall continue a free, enlightened liberal Republic, or. whether we shall relapse into the state of quasi republicanism which prevailed before the war. The teachings of the Democratic party for the past ten years have been sufficient to convince us, that they are in no manner reconciled to the status of things as settled by the late war. At every favorable opportunity they take special pains government and do not hesitate to declare, that at an opportune time the whole fabric of reconstruction will be overthrown and the country remanded back to the domination of those who fer upwards of thirty years planned its overthrow.

The Democratic party is fast drifting back to its former condition. The leaders of that party have again made the welkin ring with the old cry of "an united South." Senators from their seats in the House of National Legislation are again bold and defiant, and threaten the government with a solid Democratic vote from the Southern States. They are endeavoring by all means at their command to again stir up sectional feeling and thus "fire the Northern heart." In their wild schemes for power they are promised the substantial aid of Northern Copperheads and traitors, and thus, the ball is rolling on which if not checked by the decisive rebuke of the loyal people of the country will bring upon us another, and, we fear a more terrible strife than that from which we have so lately emerged. The sum and substance of this matter is, that the spirit of secession is still alive and its flames are being fanned to an alarming extent. The present House of Representatives is already as unsound in many respects as any . Confederate Congress that ever assembled in Richmond. It is not only so, but it is a more dangerous body, because of the fact, that it commands more facilities to strike down the liberties of the people.

the General Government in the hands of such men, we are threatened with the overthrow of all the great principles and measures secured by four years of bloody strife, what would not the Democratic party do if the entire management of National affairs should unfortunately be entrusted to them? This is a question well worth studying between now and November. It is a serious question, and it becomes the loyal American people to ponder over it well before final action. "We have scotched the snake; not killed it."
