great battles between the north and the south and one of the bloc 1862. The Contederates had do cidedly the best of it the first day driving off their gunboats. Had not Buell arrived with a freeh army it seems certain that Grant's co tured or almost ann up gave the Federals a great ; ponderance of numbers and the second day saw a drawn battle. But the Confederates inflicted far heavier losses than they received, if we except their loss of Albert Sidney ohnson, which was irreparable. Of the Union troops 1,735 were killed, 7,882 wounded and 8,954 missing, making a total of 13.57 The total Confederate loss k wounded and missing, was If Both sides did splendid and exhibited throughout the the highest soldierly qualities.
