SKETCHES OF ITALY IN PROSE AND VERSE

From the London Monthly Magazine.

Where come on its lake's still bosom... Bleak Alpine snows, and summer-fervid hues...

ening of the cords of the camels, which are thrown over their backs when they are sent to pasture. We discover the rustic manner of our ancient Britons...

The following lines by Gothe, the celebrated poet, are now, we believe, for the first time presented to our readers.

THE UNITED STATES. A land more fair and happy, never sun View'd in his wide career!

PATRIOTIC SONG. AIR—"Scotts who hae wi' Wallace bled." Britons! who, by Wellington, To glory off have been led;

Fifty Years Hence!—The increase of population in the United States within ten years, appears by the last census to have been upwards of three millions.

AN OLD PAPER.—The Newport Mercury of Saturday last says:—"This number completes seventy-three years since the Newport Mercury was first published in this town, (June 12, 1758) by JAMES FRANKLIN, brother of Dr. Benjamin Franklin."

THE first fine edge of the feelings, fortunately for mankind, both in pleasure and pain, is worn off by the first enjoyment and the first suffering.

NEW YORK, June 16. Signor Da Ponte, whose Italian library we mentioned as containing the most valuable and rare works in the literature of his country, has, we understand, made an arrangement for bestowing it upon the Collegiate Institute for Young Ladies at Brooklyn.

A Cherokee has recently returned from the nation west of the Mississippi, who mentions that in the election for members of the Cherokee Legislature, the successful candidates were all recent emigrants from Georgia.

We learn from the "Conemaugh Republican," printed at Blairsville, that a most lamentable circumstance occurred in Fairfield township in this county, on the 19th ult.

THE TIDES AGAIN.—Without being able to account for, we must again record the astonishing rise of the Tide, in our harbor. At dark, last evening, the water had risen above many of our wharves, and continued to rise.

A noble cargo.—The ship Splendid of 642 tons, whose magnitude justifies her name, commanded by Capt. Britton, cleared at Mobile on 2d inst. for Liverpool, having on board two thousand and ninety-nine bales of cotton.

From the Ontario Repository. BLACK CHERRY TREE.—A medical correspondent of the Cooperstown Watchtower says that the bark of this tree is poisonous.

Effects of Fright.—We have often remarked on the impropriety of exciting the fears of children, for the purpose of more easily managing them; but never, since we appeared before the public, have we heard of any thing so horrible as the following.

Extraordinary Contest.—Captain Crow, in a work recently published, relates the following as having occurred on a voyage to Memel:—"One morning during a calm, when near the Hebrides, all hands were called up at three o'clock in the morning to witness a battle between several of the fish called thrashers and some sword-fish on one side and an enormous whale on the other."

view than to place such parents as may read the York Herald upon their guard with respect to those to whom they may intrust the care of their innocent and helpless offspring.

Mysterious Document.—A communication, of which the following is an exact copy, was received by post on Tuesday, at the Manchester police office. It bears the Nantwich post mark. Of course, the most distant idea cannot be formed of the object or purpose of this singular communication:—

Anne Minshull Sent for a gown at township of gorten blew short sleeves axe him place to look after them Children won after me every where low part pour house.

The number of Emigrants reported this forenoon was 20,126. Of these 5737 have arrived during the past week. The number actually arrived probably exceeds by fully ten per cent that stated in the return.

Parisian Society.—The tone of society in Paris is very far from John Bullish. They do not ask what a man is worth, or whether his father is the owner of a tin-mine or a borough—but what has he to say, whether he is amiable and spiritual.

A bashful man is like a tiger; he makes but one effort, and if that fails, slinks away to his jungle, and essays not another.—I myself have my own experience to vouch for this; having in the far-off days of my gallantry, full many a time and oft, in dining out, gathered myself together with a gallant ferocity to ask the lady of the feast for the honor of a glass of wine with her.

Blessed, indeed, yea, thrice blessed is he whom trifles can make happy; it is this which forms the bliss of childhood, and the consolation of old age, each of which finds its appropriate enjoyments in an exemption from the serious labors and oppressive anxieties of the world's great business.

The two Sexes.—The last number of the Ladies' Magazine contains its usual variety of valuable and interesting matter. The following true and elegant paragraphs are extracted from an article by Mrs. Sigourney, whose mind is the dwelling of light and beauty.

Let us be content with the lot we have, and let us be content with the lot we have, and let us be content with the lot we have, and let us be content with the lot we have.

manner they continued tormenting and wounding him for many hours, until we lost sight of him; and I have no doubt they, in the end, accomplished his destruction.

The same author gives the following account of a sacrifice at Bonny, in Africa:—"Whilst at Bonny, a distressing ceremony took place. It was the custom there, once in seven years, to sacrifice a virgin of fifteen or sixteen years of age, as a propitiatory offering to Boreas, the god of the North wind.
