TO MESSRS. INGHAM, BRANCH & BERRIEN,

On the Dissolution of the late Cabinet. (CONCLUDED.)

City of Washington, September 1831. I have a statement of another and similar conver-

Gideon Welles, Editor of the Hartford Times. He "On the subject of the next Presidential election, Mr.

Green adverted to the embarrassed situation of Mr. Calhoun at the expiration of his present term, when he would have served eight years, equal to that of any of his predecessors; and that Mr. Van Buren, taking advantage of his situation wished to ruin him by driving him into retirement. It was the policy of Mr. Van Bure-election, because that would lead to the postponement of Mr. Calhoun's claims, and occasion him in a great degree to be forgotten. It would put Mr. Van Buren in advance of him, and this was the reason he 'was desirous that General Jackson should consent to a

In that letter he says : the former consequence of this journal, arose from the circumstances, that heretofore it went with the peoplenot the people with it. The moment, however, that Mr. Van Buren was appointed Secretary of State, jealousy and fear arose, and then the desire was to place around the President as many of Mr. Calhoun's friends as possible, to counteract the apprehended and dreaded influence; a part of which I most gratuitously was supposed to be. creasing patronage which he receives, he promises Devoted, as I was said to be, to General Jackson, and the success of his administration, my appointment was He continues to make COFFINS, and to superin- calculated rather to thwart than to promote their ulterior if not the third, were in the secret, and used the influence and importance which office gave them and their families, to promote and further their grand design.

Months had rolled away, and as yet the President had never seen and corrected the evil as was expected. Mr. Van Buren, it was feared, had gained, and was gaining so fast upon my esteem, that serious apprehensions were entertained that I would fail within the vortex of his influence. In addition, it was imagined, or rather feared, The subscriber has on hand a few neat Phi- that General Jackson might consent to a re-election, and reasons were discerned why Van Buren would desire it as matter of interest to his, and how, through my influence, the matter might succeed, and the claims of Mr. made, Two COPPER STILLS, and an elegant Calhoun be deferred, his prospects injured, and he driven asortment of self-sharpening PENCILS, and Silver into retirement. These, together with almost every article tience of longer delay arose "Some decisive step," in the SADDLERY and HARNESS line, he of- says Mr. Green, "must be taken, or else I do not know what will be the consequence." This "malign influence," which was operated upon by the crafty subtlety of Mr. Van Buren must be removed, or the effect will be to postpone Mr Calhoun's claims, and drive him into retirement. It must be removed from the President, and to accomplish it, I was to retire, not only from the Cabinet, but from Washington, that I might be as far distant a possible from the scene of their fruitful operations. The Secretary of War was not qualified for the duties of the country at one of the most important courts of Europe. He and his family were not fit and good society for the T appearing to the satisfaction of the Court, that the Berrien, and vet they were to be considered quite "good Defendant is not an inhabitant of this State: It is society" enough for one of the first and most powerful detsroy him if he did consent.

Now, can any man in his senses fail to wonder, that I should decline all these liberal offers, and finally retire from the Cabinet for no better reason than is asserted by these County Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions, gentlemen, that the families of Ingham, Branch and Berrien would not visit me and my family? VOL. 22V..... NO. 25.

Most of the President's nominations had been before the Senate during the whole winter, and the public were at a loss to know why they were not disposed of. The friends of Mr. Calhoun were constantly pouring into the ears of those who were depending on the Senate for confirmation, exaggerated accounts of his strength in that body; and the political preferences of those in nomination. were secretly and artfully sought after. They pretended to have polled both houses of Congress, and to have ascertained that a majority in each, were his friends. Mr. Hill was rejected from the office of Second Comptroller of the Treasury, and Mr. Green paid him a visit of condolence, during which he sought to persuade him, that De had been sacrificed to "the Eaton and Van Buren inflicence." Others were privately warned, that they were in danger from the same quarter. It certainly would have been a masterly stroke of policy, if Mr. Hill could have been sent to New-Hampshire, Mr. Kendall to Kentucky. Mr. Noah to New York, and other former Editors back to their homes, to resume their professional duties, impressed with the belief, that they had been made the victims, not of an Ingham, Berrien and Branch, but of "the Eaton and Van Buren influence." It was a good idea, if it could have succeeded; but being rather far-fetched it failed. Thus it is apparent, that it was not the Secretary of War alone, that they desired to get rid of, but the Seretary of State also. One of the members of Congress, who attended the perparatory meeting about the 20th of March, for the purpose of regulating the President's Cabinet, being enquired of, if my removal would satisfy them, answered emphatically : "No; we will be satisfied with no accustom themselves to think lightly of the New England democracy. My own opinion is, that that democracy may yet hold the fate of the Union in their hands." Thus were the democracy of New England addressed. They were warned against the New York Enquirer, and notified of an altimate coalition, first with Mr. Clay and Mr. Webster, and if that failed, then with Mr. Van Buren. Webster would "come into the market" in great force, and sell out to Mr. Clay, if he could purchase, or to Mr. Van Buren if he could not. The jealousy of the New England democracy was thus to be aroused; and they excited to action by being told "they were to be offered up as the victims of vengeance;" and that "bold and de. cisive means would ensure us triumph."
