

From the Jacksonville Courier, of the 7th January.

Indian Hostilities.
Last night Capt. Ross, with several of his company, arrived in town. After the battle at Whiteochocky, the forces under General Clinch and Call, returned to Camp Lang Syne. On Sunday last, Gen. Call with the volunteers from Middle Florida, started for home; and on Monday, Colonels Warren and Mills, with the volunteers from East Florida, set out on their return, and were last night at Black Creek. They will reach this place to-night. The whole of East Florida is in danger. The Indians have possession of the southern portion of it as far north as Bulow's, forty miles south of St. Augustine. Picolata on the St. Johns—Whiteville on Black Creek, Aligator and Suwannee—an extensive and exposed frontier. It is the general opinion, that unless adequate aid is immediately extended to us, the whole of Florida, east of the Suwannee river, will be inevitably ruined. We must abandon our property to destruction, but, stripped of all our hard earnings, must fight for our lives, our women and children.

A great battle was fought on the 31st ult, in which many on both sides were slain and wounded. The battle ground was on the Whiteochocky River, about 35 miles from Camp Lang Syne, and within a few miles of the Indian Warrior Powell's town, where it is supposed, the Indian women and children are assembled.
The officers and men engaged on the 31st, we are happy to learn, behaved with great bravery. In fact, such was the disposition of the Indian forces, their boldness and desperate fighting that nothing but the determined spirit with which the men fought and charged into the swamp, put the Indians to flight and silenced their fighting.

The engagements lasted one hour and five minutes. At the first onset, Indians on one flank leaped from their hiding places, and in front of the thicket formed boldly into line with Powell at their head. At this moment, the fire of the whites did execution; the Indians broke, taking to their covert again. It is thought that Powell is wounded in the hand.
The Indian Agent, Wiley Thompson, Lieut. Constantine Smith, Erasmus Rogers, and two others, murdered by the Indians.

On the 13th day the 28th ult, a party of ten men dining at the residence of Erasmus Rogers, father at Camp King were sitting at table, by a party of Indians. The Indians were not above 250 yards from the Block House. Rogers was sitting at the head of the table, when the Indians rushed upon the presence of the foe, was a volley of it, it is thought, at least 100 shot, poured in upon them through the open door.

The Indians rushed upon the house. Those in, not killed, sprang out of the windows on each side. Five, fleeing to Camp King, escaped. The others, fleeing for a hammock close by, were shot down.

A negro woman, the cook, ran behind the counter, (this house was used by Rogers as store) and hiding behind a barrel, was unobserved by the Indians. They rushed into the house, Powell at their head; threw down the table, and looking around for a moment left the house.

The five of this party slain, were Gen. Thompson the Indian Agent, Lieut. Constantine Smith, Erasmus Rogers the sutler, Suggs and Hitzler. Through Gen. Thompson, son were shot fifteen bullets, and sixteen through Rogers. The Indians scalped all, taking off the scalp clear around, the head as far as hair extended, and then beating in their skulls. The heads of Rogers and Suggs, were shockingly mangled. All this was done in open daylight, within 250 yards of Camp King; and in view of the 50 U. S. Troops, there at that time. Why did they not rush out to their rescue, or, rather, why did they not fly to the two six pounders in the Block House upon these bold savages, committing before their face and eyes, within 250 yards, such deeds of barbarity?

From the Pennsylvanian.

PRESIDENTIAL PROSPECTS.

Our neighbor of the Inquirer, famed in 1832 for "close calculations," which proved to be wide of the mark, a day or two since, being in a playful mood, sported another calculation upon the election of 1836, which he did not think extravagant! The upshot of the cyphering was to send the election to the House, Martin Van Buren taking after it with only fifty-seven votes to bless himself with—those of New York, Maine, and New Hampshire, all the rest being distributed pro rata among Messrs. White, Webster, and Harrison. Ideas of extravagance differ materially. In our opinion, this close calculation was a most splendid and lavish proceeding, and it is not to be doubted that either in consequence of this, or something else, whiggery will be bankrupt in November next.

We find the subjoined calculation, the other way, regarding among the newspapers, which we do not think so very extravagant, and ask our cotemporary to place it on record to be proved by the result.

For Van Buren.	For Harrison.
New York 42	Kentucky 15
Maine 10
New Hampshire 7	For Webster.
Connecticut 7	Massachusetts 14
Rhode Island 3	Delaware 3
New Jersey 8
Pennsylvania 30	For White.
Ohio 21	Tennessee 15
Indiana 9	S. Carolina 11
Illinois 5	Louisiana 5
Virginia 21
North Carolina 11	Doubtful.
Georgia 11	Alabama 7
Missouri 4	Mississippi 4
	Vermont 10
	Maryland 4
	200
Necessary to a choice 146
More than necessary 54

From this it will be seen that we have enough for our purpose, and plenty to spare. Giving up Virginia and Pennsylvania, we should still succeed, and both those states will cast their votes for the democratic nominations. One or two of the states set down as doubtful, may be ours, and should there be bolting on the part of some of those claimed for Van Buren, the result would scarcely be altered. The enemy must be blinded indeed, if they entertain hopes of carrying the election to the House, their unbound and disunited bundle of sticks against democratic unity, and a perfect organization, founded on disinterestedness and an ardent desire for the triumph of principle. If they, however, do enter into such hope, it is a calculation as extravagant as that of the Pennsylvania Inquirer.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—At the great meeting of the British Association, lately held in Dublin, a most interesting paper upon paper making was read by Mr. Mallet. The discovery of some substitute for rags has long been sought by the manufacturers of paper, and of all the materials tried, none seem to equal the vegetable fibres of certain kinds of peat or turf. This peat possesses properties foreign to other materials, and being easily procured will become an article of inestimable value to manufacturers. One hundred weight of the peat in its natural state, produces 18 pounds of pulp. Some paper of the very best description has already been manufactured from it. In Ireland there are two millions of acres or bogs, the average depth of which is 28 feet.—[Montreal Herald.]

With deep concern we learn that at about two o'clock on yesterday, the bridge across the Kentucky river at Frankfort, fell, precipitating two or three wagons and teams, with their drivers, and several other persons, into the river. The number of persons killed, or further paralytically, we have not heard.—Ky Gaz.

ANALYSIS OF A LADY'S TEAR.

This was really effected by the celebrated Smithson, one of the Fellows of the London Royal Society. Nothing, it seems, eluded the grasp of this inquiring man, who not content with operating on the common subject which nature had placed before him, presumed to approach the fount of beauty itself, wherein to satisfy his curiosity. He had analysed more than a dew-drop—a lady's tear! He caught the pearly treasure as it fell from its source, and on submitting it to his tests, discovered that it contained two separate salts.
