and he named Speaker Randall.

[Applause.] The chair asked if the convention would have Tilden's letter read, [cries "yes" and "no,"] and in a hiss voice decided no. Thomas, of Kentucky, offered a resolution denouncing as unconstitutional and unrepugnant any State law affecting a citizen on account of religious or non-religious views. Referred.

The Democrats four years ago named a man who was elected President, and to day they had named the next.

He urged a vigorous campaign--no campaign of defence, but one of constant aggression. He too pledged Pennsylvania to place herself in November next in the Democratic column. In response to loud calls Wade Hampton advanced to the platform and said in behalf of the solid South, which was once arrayed against the gallant soldier...

lively Irish air by the band, and there were great calls for him.

The chair said it gave him great pleasure to announce to the convention that the action to-day had united the great Democracy of New York; also, that the contestants from that State had come here to give in their allegiance. He introduced John Kelly who was greeted with great applause and some hisses. Kelly said it was true that Hancock's nomination had united the Democracy of New York. Though they had been fighting bitterly for five years, let past differences be now banished forever.

LAST DAY AT CINCINNATI.

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH THE UNANIMOUS CHOICE OF THE DEMOCRACY.

Cincinnati, June 24, 10 a. m.--The sky is overcast and the temperature hot and sultry. The doorkeepers are taking up all platform and reporters, tickets. This indicates a conviction of the national committee that the convention will nominate a candidate and finish business during to-day's session.

Before the official announcement of the result a motion was made and carried for a new roll call of States.

The sergeant-at-arms announced that the chair had ordered no applause until the roll should be finished. Alabama voted solid for Hancock; [hisses] Arkansas, California, Colorado, ditto. Announcements of changes to Hancock from the Tilden States were greeted with hisses from the galleries.

The band played Dixie to great cheers, followed by the Star Spangled Banner, in which the great organ joined with fine effect.

The transparency of the Philadelphia Randall Association was brought in with Randall's portrait on one side and on the other "For President of the United States, Winfield Scott Hancock." Voorhees, of Indiana, said, though somewhat sore-hearted, the Indiana Democracy would do her duty in supporting the nominee of this convention.

Platform.

The Democrats of the United States in convention assembled declare: First, We pledge ourselves anew to the constitutional doctrines and traditions of the Democratic party as illustrated by the teaching and example of a long line of Democratic statesmen and patriots, and embodied in the platform of the last National convention of the party.

mand reform by a statute which shall make it forever impossible for a defeated candidate to bribe his way to the seat of a successor.

[This was read again in response to demands and was received with applause.] Ninth. The resolution of Samuel J. Tilden not to run for a candidate for the exalted place to which he was elected by a majority of his countrymen, and from which he was excluded by the leaders of the Republican party, is received by the Democrats of the United States with sympathy, and they declare their confidence in his wisdom, patriotism and integrity to be unshaken by the assaults of a common enemy, and they further assure him that he is followed into the retirement he has chosen for himself by the sympathy and respect of his fellow-citizens...
