Age after Age shall Pass.

Composed in 1888 by W. W. H. Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away,

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, That mingle darkly with the voiceless through

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, Throughout the chambers of unbroken death.

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, The firm set earth Shall go again to chaos, when the shock

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, Its shining seas and strong embattled hills.

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, The sun of Heaven Shall quench the unwaning light that

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, Serenely bright through all its jewelled hills:

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, The stars shall cease their music march, And one by one go out forever.

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, But the soul of man Outliving all, triumphant shall ascend,

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, On pinion free, with sweet unfeeling life, To dwell forever where the angels pour

Age after age shall pass With babbling tongue and rending shont, away, Their glorious music. Change shall never come
