Warehouse at the Depot.

As it is now, Freight has to stand at the North Carolina depot in the cars until it can be delivered. There is no where to unload it, and when the weather is bad, the yard is in such miserable plight, that it is next to impossible for the people to get their freight. Of course, admitting the sense in having a warehouse anywhere, it is indeed singular that this depot has been without one for so long a time.

Philadelphia Press.

The "scizzors" man on the Philadel phia Press copies extensively the locals of the Era, strings them with others taken from Atlanta and Macon papers, and sets the dish out as a "rich mine" of "mental enjoyment." If the "scizzors" man would work more in mines of this kind and wet his nose less frequent in mint of another kind, the in-3 plates of soup a day, and the Press wouldn't present such a spilled toddy appearance.

Settle Up.

Those of you who are in arrears for this paper will have an opportunity to pay up in a few days. It is just that you have forgotten it no doubt, and it is our fault in not having sent the account to you sooner. You see we are just agonizing to please you, for we know you are smart, and what you don't know about "how" to run a newspaper, you can make up for, by crosslegged conversational talent of unusual brilliancy. You are all right. Just settle the little account we send you,

Captain Frank Erwin was the conductor. Maj. Atkinson, the road supervisor, went up immediately from Greensboro and set a force to work removing the wreck.

The mail trains stop on each side of this river, while the bridge is being repaired, and the passengers and baggage are transferred in a boat.

The Era in New York. A letter written by a prominent gentleman in New York, and signed "W," to the worthy proprietor of the Era newspaper, reads as follows: "Dear Sir: I have carefully read such copies of the Era as have come into my possession, and I feel impressed to put on paper an expression of my sentiments and to give a word, not simply of encouragement, but advice. Of course you can take it for what it is worth, or throw this in the fire, as may seem best, Whether one Editor is responsible for what appears, or whether you have a corps of Editors, makes no difference. LONDON, Jan. 31-A telegraphic dispatch to Lloyds, from their agent at Cadiz, confirms the report that it was the Spanish steamer Murillo which ran into and sunk the emigrant ship Northfleet, off Durgeness light House on the night of the 22d inst. The steamship, Daily however, was not sunk herself, as was at one time believed, but has arrived in Cadiz in safety. Her destination was Lisbon, for which port she had a cargo, but upon entering that harbor she was signalled not to load, as there is an extradition treaty between Portugal and Great Britain, under which the officers would have been surrendered to the British authorities to answer charges brought against them. She consequently put to sea again and proceeded to Cadiz, as there is no treaty between Great Britain and Spain. .

The Murillo sustained no damage by the collision. Her officers and crew an era of perfect will soon be examined at Cadiz in relation to the disaster.
