WEEKLY ERA. THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1873.

A Boy Hangs Himself. We are informed that a bright and sensible boy named H. L. L. hung himself near Trip Hill in Wilkes county the other day. Cause of suicide unknown. He was aged about 12 or 14 years old and the son of John W. Halbrooks.

Returned from Arkansas. Another one. He went to Arkansas three years ago, he and his wife, and they got off the cars last night, going back home, six miles from Company Shops, with three children, two of them twins, and they all had the chills and the children cry couldn't stand Arkansas. He said he made as much corn as he wanted out there but could only sell it for 25 cents a bushel. Now see what they made: Just been gone three years and brought back three children and their clothes full of chills!

Railroad Changes and Appointments. Engineer Henry Smith of the Freight train has been appointed a Conductor on the North Carolina Division of the Richmond and Danville Railroad in place of William H. Thompson resigned. Mr. Lillington from the depot at Burkeville (Va.) reached this city this morning and will be appointed as billing clerk at the North Carolina depot. Capt. Sam. Robinson, an old railroad man, but for the last several years in charge of the marble yard in Charlotte, has been appointed a conductor on the freight train from Charlotte vice Felix Crutchfield who has received an appointment on the North Western N. C. R. R., and will run from Greensboro to Kernersville. Mr. Peter Adams of Greensboro, now clerk to Maj. Atkinson, the railway and bridge Supervisor, has also been made wood receiver in this Division, and we learn the contents of having the conductors to check for wood.

Charlotte—A Woolly Horse and Spotted Dog. A woolly horse made its appearance on the streets of Charlotte last Saturday, in the hands of countryman who asked one hundred and ten dollars for the animal. He was a well grown iron gray, five years old, and had as much pure wool on his back as ever a sheep had at one shearing. A spotted coach dog that knew his master's voice followed his master the other day, when his master had no business, and the dog getting shut out went back home, and like a good dog, took his mistress to the very place that his master was at. For about fifteen minutes there was a fight in the air, between the pins and other articles which the mistress returned home accompanied by master dog, and though he still thinks that dog the "smartest one in town," he thinks his only fault is to "run about" too much, and whenever he goes out now, you bet that dog is chained at home!

A Country Girl Saved from Shame. Every day affords us an instance of the shame of the brute propping out in the being called man. A case of this sort occurred the other day on the Charlotte, Columbia and Air Line railroad. A fellow living in Charlotte had sent his wife to live in South Carolina and he took the cars and ran down to Thomasville after his wife's sister, a young and unsophisticated country girl living near that town. When they got on the Air Line road he bought a berth in the sleeping car for her and sent her in there to sleep some, telling Conductor Hand that she was his wife. The Conductor thought something wrong and told the porter if anything happened to let him know. In the night the porter came to Captain Hand and told him, "that the woman was crying." He went to her berth and enquired the matter but she was sobbing so that she could hardly speak. He asked her if that man, pointing to the fellow, was her husband, and she told him "No, he was her sister's husband, and had made base proposals to her," and "said she, "all I could do was to cry." Captain Hand suggested to the brute if he didn't get immediately into the second class car and remain there that he would try to see how fine he could break up his glass lantern over his head. The fellow took his advice but when he got in there began putting on airs, and the passengers, who had got wind of it and sympathized with her, told him if he didn't dry up they would have the train stopped and "pick a tree." On reaching Columbia they made up a purse for the girl and sent her off back to her home near Thomasville.
