How Smikes Stopped Chewing To- entering the ports of the United

Smikes made up his mind to stop chewing. He never was much of a chewer, anyhow, he said. He hadn't used tobacco but a few years, and rarely consumed more than an paper in a day. But he feared the habit might get hold of him and become fixed, and if there was anything that he abhorred it was to see a man become a slave to a bad habit. He had used the weed some, to be sure, but there had never been a time during the last ten years when he could not stop at any mohundment. But so long as he did not dollar ecome habituated to its use he did For ot care to stop. He could break and rer at any minute, and it was a great acids, trisfaction to feel so. Thompson, neoue thought, was an abject slave thou to his pipe. He pitied Thompson, for he had seen Thompson try to stop smoking several times, and fail ignominiously every time he undertook it. But Smikes wanted to show his wife how easy he could time when it is usual to look back quit. Twice that afternoon smikes took out his tobacco-box and looked at it. Once he took off the cover, and smelled of the tobacco. It smelt so good that Smikes felt impelled to remark to himself that it was the easiest thing in the world | By the President: to stop chewing. He congratulated himself again and again that day that he did not become entangled in the meshes of the filthy vice, and he alluded to the matter three or four times that evening at the tea table, till Samantha marveled greatly at the firmness of Smikes. She had always heard, she said, that It was a hard thing to leave off. But Smikes had told her and kept telling her that it was "just as and her reverence for the vertile strength and independence of character of Smikes grew like a gourd. That night Smikes had the nightmare. He thought that a legion of foul fiends had got him up in a corner of the back yard, and had rolled upon his belly a monstrous quid of "line-cut" as large around as a cart-wheel, and that they were trying to force it into his mouth. Smikes struggled vigorously, and when Samantha shook him and asked him what was the matter, his only reply was, that "anybody could stop chewing if they only made up their mind to The next day Smikes was a little nervous. He told everybody who came in what a simple thing it was to stop chewing. The third day he harped about it all day long. He told one man about it three different times, and when that much informed individual ventured the opinion that he would be chewing again in less than a week, Smikes indignantly ejaculated: "Mr. Jenkins, when I make up my mind to a thing that is the last of it!" The fourth day Smikes heard that chamomile blossoms were sometimes used as a substitute for tobacco, and just out of curiosity he devoured a couple of ounces of them. He said to the druggist when he bought them that it was easy enough to stop the use of tobacco. On the fifth day Smikes got sick. His nerves gave out. He snapped some-
