Leaving out Alaska, fit only for bears, seals and savages, the thirty-eight States and ten territories of the United States cover an area of 3,010,000 square miles, or 1,926,400,000 acres. No similar area in the world has so much fertile soil, such excellent climate characteristics, or is capable of such varied and valuable productions. The ten eastern and midfle States cover an area of 171, 788 square miles, or a little more than one twentieth of the whole territory, and about two-thirds of the area occupied by the single State of Texas. Until recently the ten eastern and middle States preponderated over all the other States and territories both in population and wealth. But "westward the course of empire takes its way" and this condition of things is now reversed. The west and the southwest together now hold the larger share, not only of population but of postical power and actual wealth. AGGREGATE WEALTH OF THE COUNTRY.
